Leaving his assignment in Tokyo in 2014, Ricardo moved to Denver, where he started working for CW Hemp and has aided in the distribution of Charlotte’s Web™ to many countries worldwide. Currently CW Hemp is working with several universities and hospitals around the world to provide medical studies regarding the benefits of cannabinoids.

Synopsis of Course:

Mr. Beherens will be talking all what we know about the endocannabinoid system, phytocannabinoids and endocannabinoids, starting from when they discovered it to where we are now. As for the endocannabinoid system, we’ll go through both CB receptors and the effects they are know to have in the body, as well as what we know so far about our endocannabinoid substances, how they work and what function they play in our bodies and systems, their agonists and antagonist effects in the receptors and substances as well as where these substances are metabolized. Once these subjects are covered, We’ll be talking about phytocannabinoids and not only the onces produced by cannabis but we also will be mentioning some of the phytocannabinoids that are produced by other plants. We’ll talk about about the difference between isolated cannabinoids and whole plant extracts, the entourage effect and given the science discussed before, we we’ll be discussing some possible benefits from these compounds on specific conditions. Additionally we will cover the difference between hemp and marijuana and certain basic aspects of the current laws.
