Assistant Professor in Public Health

The Department of Nutrition and Public Health at the University of Saint Joseph invites applications for an Assistant Professor in Public Health. The position is a full time, tenure track, nine-month appointment beginning August 2016. The department offers an undergraduate public health major, an accredited undergraduate dietetic program, a nutrition and wellness major, a post-graduate accredited dietetic internship, and an online nutrition graduate degree program. Faculty within the department also conduct research with several active grants.

The successful candidate will have a doctoral degree in Public Health, or a closely related discipline such as epidemiology; commitment to undergraduate teaching and advising; effective oral and written communication and interpersonal skills; and demonstrated potential for grant funded scholarship and publications. Preferred qualifications include expertise (research or teaching) in epidemiology, health systems and policy, or health services administration.

Primary responsibilities include teaching a variety of courses at the undergraduate level, and in the future at the graduate level, student advisement, committee and other service activities, and potentially conducting grant-funded research. Courses may include epidemiology, global health, health literacy and health care policy. Responsibilities as a USJ Professor comprise active participation in department, school, and university activities and committees. In accordance with the university's mission, faculty are responsible for advancing professional development in teaching, scholarship and service to the university and affiliated communities.

Interested applicants should send a CV, brief statement (2 pages or less) of teaching and research interests/philosophy, transcripts, and three letters of recommendation to the Department of Nutrition and Public Health Search, Human Resources, University of Saint Joseph, 1678 Asylum Avenue, West Hartford, CT, 06117; or email to hr@usj.edu. Review of applications will begin upon receipt and will continue until the position is filled.
