

Naomi Jane Gray is a partner in the IP boutique law firm Harvey Siskind LLP in San Francisco, where she focuses her practice on copyright and trademark litigation, prosecution and counseling. She was one of the lead attorneys representing the National Geographic Society in a series of cutting-edge lawsuits at the intersection of traditional print media and emerging electronic technologies which ultimately established the Geographic's right to reproduce National Geographic flagship magazine in electronic format (e.g., Faulkner, et al. v. National Geographic Society, et al., 294 F. Supp. 2d 523 (S.D.N.Y. 2003); aff'd, 409 F.3d 26 (2d Cir. 2005)). Ms. Gray has advised clients on diverse types of copyright issues, including fair use, work for hire, transfers, licenses and enforcement in transactional, counseling and litigation settings. Ms. Gray also serves as an arbitrator on the Commercial Panel of the American Arbitration Association, and in 2015 was named by the Silicon Valley Arbitration & Mediation Center as one of the world's leading technology neutrals.

Ms. Gray is a frequent speaker on topical issues in the copyright area, having appeared at events hosted by the Copyright Society of the U.S.A; the American Intellectual Property Law Association; the Practising Law Institute; the American Bar Association; the State Bar of California; the San Francisco Intellectual Property Law Association; the American Arbitration Association; and the Center for Law, Technology and the Arts of Case Western Reserve University School of Law. Ms. Gray is the Membership Co-Chair of the Copyright Society of the U.S.A. and previously served as the Society's National Chapters Co-Chair, Trustee, member of the Executive Committee, and Chair of the Northern California Chapter. She also served on the Committee on Copyrights and Literary Property of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York from 2000-2003. She authors Shades of Gray®, a copyright law blog available at www.shadesofgraylaw.com, and tweets about intellectual property law developments under the Twitter handle @shadesofgraylaw.
