

Nicholas M. O'Donnell is a partner in the Litigation Department of the Boston office of Sullivan & Worcester. Mr. O'Donnell's practice focuses primarily on complex civil litigation. He represents manufacturers, individuals, investment advisers, banks, and others around the world in contract, securities, consumer protection, tort and domestic relations cases, with particular experience in the German-speaking world. He is also the editor of the Art Law Report, a blog that provides timely updates and commentary on legal issues in the museum and visual arts communities, one of his areas of expertise. He earned his J.D. from Boston College Law School, 2003, and his B.A., magna cum laude, from Williams College, 1997.