Madeleine Lamothe-Samson is a partner at the Montreal office of Norton Rose Fulbright Canada. Her practice focuses on copyright and entertainment law, and trademark issues. She regularly advises clients in the music, television and film, book publishing, Internet and advertising industries, including copyright collectives. Madeleine’s practice also includes litigation in front of the Quebec superior Court, Federal Court of Canada and the Copyright Board of Canada.

Madeleine earned a master's degree in intellectual property law at the University of Toronto. She also worked in a law firm in Mexico prior to joining her current firm. She is the president of the Canadian branch of ALAI (Association Littéraire et Artistique Internationale), as well as a member of ALAI's international executive committee.