• Employers are not required to allow an employee to:
  o Earn more than 40 hours of earned sick and safe leave in a year.

• Employers are not required to compensate an employee for unused earned sick and safe leave when the employee leaves the employer’s employment.
• If employer gives an advance of leave and the employee leaves the company before it is all earned, the employer may deduct the amount owed from the employee’s wages providing a signed statement was obtained when the leave advance was made.
• If an employee leaves your employment and returns within 37 weeks, he/she must be reinstated for leave previously earned unless the employer voluntarily paid it out when the employee departed.
• Earned leave from old company must transfer to new company.

Notification by Employee for Taking Leave:
• If leave is foreseeable, an employer can request reasonable, advance notice of not more than 7 days before the date the leave would begin.
- If leave is not foreseeable, the employee must provide notice to an employer as soon as practicable and must generally comply with the employer’s notice or procedural requirements for requesting or reporting other leave if those requirements do not interfere with the employee’s ability to use earned sick and safe leave.
- An employer may deny a request if the employee fails to provide the required notice and the employee’s absence will cause a disruption or the employer provides services to DD or mentally ill individuals and the leave is foreseeable but the employer is unable to provide a suitable replacement and the employee’s absence will cause a disruption of service to at least one individual with a DD or mental illness.

Tracking:
- Employees can take leave in smallest increment payroll system allows and may be required to take earned sick and safe leave in an increment not exceeding 4 hours.
- Employees using leave for more than 2 consecutive shifts may be required to provide verification that it was used for the purposes allowed or the leave is used during the period between the first 107 and 120 calendar days that the employee was employed by the employer and the employee agreed to provide verifications under terms mutually agreed to by the employer and the employee at the time the employer was hired by the employer.
- Amount of leave must be tracked and provided in writing to employees when paid.
- Special rules apply for tip employees in the restaurant industry.

Notice & Recordkeeping:
- Employers must advise employees of leave entitlement, how they can use it, accrual rate, prohibition against adverse actions, and right to bring civil action. Can be accomplished with a labor law poster developed by DLLR.
- DLLR must develop a model paid sick and safe leave that an employer may use as a policy in an employee handbook or other written guidance to employees and must provide technical assistance to an employer regarding implementation of the provisions of this subtitle.
- Recordkeeping requirement is 3 years. Failure to keep records is a rebuttable presumption that a violation has occurred.

Damages:
- No adverse actions may be taken against an employee for use of the leave.
- Civil actions – full monetary value of unpaid leave; actual economic damages; up to 3 times the economic value of the hourly wage; attorney’s fees; injunctive relief.
- $1,000 fine per violation may be assessed by the Commission.
- Employees acting in “bad faith” who file a complaint, bring an action against an employer, or testify against the employer may be fined a maximum of $1,000 (misdemeanor).
- An employer cannot be assessed a civil penalty due to an unintentional payroll error or written notice error caused by a third-party payroll service provider with whom the employer contracted for services. If an employer contracts with a third-party payroll service provider and the employer is found in violation of this subtitle as a result of the payroll service provider’s actions, the payroll service provider is liability for any penalties and costs incurred by the employer.

Preemption:
- Local jurisdictions are preempted from enacting their own laws on or after January 1, 2017. Montgomery County would not be preempted given that its law went into effect October 1, 2016.
