The Value in Virtual Career Fairs

Virtual career fairs offer maximum exposure of companies with open entry to senior level positions, one-on-one time with hiring managers, and on the spot interviews.

Free Resources

With over 50 vendors attending the career fair this fall, want all parties involved to benefit. This includes providing additional resources such as resume writing and interview preparation, mentoring on future career paths, or just a quick conversation on the workplace environment in the local area.

Know Which Organizations Will Be There

The registration page contains access to a list of vendor companies that will be in attendance. Don't judge a book by its cover. Companies have a vast list of job positions you may not know about by just knowing the company name. Knowing which companies will be attending the event gives you a chance to research the company and their open positions to prepare for a one-on-one meeting.

Build Connections

Building connections with prospective employers could give you a leg up during the hiring process. Make sure to connect with hiring managers or company presenters through LinkedIn or by exchanging e-mails to maintain those connections and grow your network.

Companies are Eager to Hire

Companies attending virtual career fairs have open positions they are looking to fill or are collecting applications for positions they are currently hiring for. Don’t see a position you’re interested in at a company that interests you? Connect with the hiring manager anyways! Growing your network and making that introduction may lead to a future position.

By preparing ahead of time for a virtual career fair, you can increase your chances of getting hired. Give yourself a competitive advantage by researching what companies will be there and focus on building connections.

>>>View the current list of vendors attending the HRAM Virtual Military Career Fair later this month!