Certificate in Public Participation

Members of the League of Extraordinary Trainers are among the practice leaders, developers and founders of the IAP2 and its Spectrum, principles and ethics. We don't just teach public involvement — we work this craft every day.

The League of Extraordinary Trainers is composed of eight highly seasoned practitioners who have designed and presented some of the most powerful and recognized training in public participation, collaboration, high stakes communication, and facilitation in the world today. Most importantly, we've been in your shoes and done the work that you do. We're not lecturers, but practitioners who have developed doable, pragmatic, and successful solutions to the problems that you face. There's almost no situation or condition that one of us hasn't managed. Whatever your challenges, whoever your stakeholders, our trainers have likely faced them and can help you create the strategies and approaches to achieve project success.

The League of Extraordinary Trainers teaches from principles not tricks. At our high-caliber trainings, you'll learn to approach any situation with the confidence that successful participation is possible and will generate positive results. The principles that you'll learn are supported by the opportunity to practice real skills that you can immediately apply to fit your unique projects and circumstances.

The Certificate Program provides a broad-based learning experience covering all of the foundations of civic engagement. Developed by the most experienced and successful practitioners from around the world, this training provides useful tools for designing and implementing practical, real world public involvement programs. The Certificate Program was designed to provide the knowledge, skills, techniques, and confidence to design and manage the most effective public involvement programs.

Training doesn't mean much if it doesn't change behavior and improve your projects immediately. When you're back in the office, you'll be informed, enlightened and empowered to do things differently.

Upon completion of all three classes, students earn a Certificate in Public Participation from IAP2.

"Excellent presentation of material—great level of material with excellent anecdotes and additional depth when appropriate."

IAP2 CERTIFICATE PROGRAM

Planning for Effective Public Participation (2 days)

This 2-day Planning class is critical for developing effective public participation. Using IAP2's Spectrum for Public Participation, you'll learn how to establish clear and achievable objectives for a public involvement program and how to define the promise to the public. Course materials include exercises using IAP2's five steps for planning effective public participation. You'll learn how to guide your organization in conducting public involvement and how to plan for the timing, techniques, and resources needed to make citizen engagement a success.

You'll also learn the practical importance of the IAP2 Core Values and how the IAP2 Code of Ethics relates to both practitioners and clients.

The detailed real world examples and practical hands-on exercises will give you the tools needed to build realistic public consensus among your stakeholders.

Note: Planning for Effective Public Participation is a prerequisite for all other IAP2 Public Participation Certificate training.

Communication for Effective Public Participation (1 day)

This one-day class will give you the fundamental communication skills specifically geared to public participation practitioners. You'll learn the Principles of Authentic Communication. You'll focus on specific tools used to prepare and present information materials effectively in a variety of forums, small and large group meeting techniques, and facilitation essentials. This course will give you the skills and confidence to deal with difficult issues, meetings and people. This course is valuable for both beginners and seasoned communicators. It covers the skills that are critical to effective public involvement and for managing the most difficult, high stakes public situations.

At the end of the day you'll understand the importance of active listening, the essentials of risk communication, how to create effective written and verbal presentations and how to work effectively with news media.

Techniques for Effective Public Participation (2 days)

This class takes you way beyond public meetings. You'll learn a range of practical techniques that can be used in a variety of situations to better communicate with people, build trusting relationships with citizens and get their help and support with public projects. Techniques that you'll learn include the World Café, Revolving Conversations, Citizen Jury, Advisory Groups, and many others that you'll be able to use immediately in your work.

The class includes full overviews of more than 40 of the most proven tools and techniques that have been tested, refined and used effectively by public participation practitioners around the globe. Interactive exercises and practical tips will take you beyond the theory, and take-home materials used throughout the two-day session reinforce skills that you'll put to immediate use.

You'll know how to get beyond endless, rancorous debates and instead create effective forums for discussion and dialogue. You'll learn how to avoid the many problems encountered in traditional public meetings. You'll leave this class armed with a detailed student manual covering the course materials and a packet of IAP2 Tip Sheets offering practical advice for selecting, using and evaluating a broad range of public consensus building activities.
