A wildlife biologist who studied mountain goats and grizzlies in the Rockies, elephants in Africa, and whales in the world's oceans, Doug Chadwick also writes about natural history, conservation, and wildlife around the world, from right whales in the sub-Antarctic to snow leopards in the Himalayas, producing close to fifty articles for National Geographic magazine. In addition, he has written thirteen books about wildlife and conservation, including Yellowstone to Yukon, and the lead chapter in Crown of the Continent: The Wildest Rockies, a photographic celebration of the region's wild-life and scenic majesty.

A Chronicle of Mongols, Ninjas, Vodka, Gold, and the World's Rarest Bears

"More than just a depiction of one species, this book highlights the interconnectedness of all species and man's obligation to protect them, in any location."

—Jeff Bridges, Actor and Activist

"Tracking Gobi Grizzlies is classic Chadwick: humorous, humble, intellectually stimulating, surprising, moral, and wise."

—Rick Bass, Activist and Author of The Lost Grizzlies

"A great and heartening adventure—it makes one hopeful to know these bears simply exist, amid the vast harsh beauty of the Gobi."

—Bill McKibben, author Earth

"This is, without a doubt, the finest book about desert-dwelling grizzly bears I've ever read."

—Jimmy Kimmel, host of Jimmy Kimmel Live

NATURE/ENVIRONMENT $24.95

In the tradition of Douglas Chadwick's best-selling adventure memoir, The Wolverine Way, Tracking Gobi Grizzlies creates a portrait of these rarest of bears' fight for survival in one of the toughest, most remote settings on Earth. He demonstrates why saving this endangered animal supports an entire ecosystem made up of hundreds of interconnected plants and animals, from desert roses to Asiatic lynx and wild double-humped camels, all adapting as best they can to the effects of climate change. A parable of environmental stewardship in a legendary realm.

"Doug Chadwick has coaxed a page-turning story out of one of the world's roughest places. Helping us see the bigger picture in ways both entertaining and thought-provoking, he urges all to consider what we are doing to the species we share the planet with. After all, as they go, so do we."

—Joel Sartore, National Geographic photographer and founder of The Photo Ark

"It's useful—and inspiring—to learn of this unique population of a branch of Ursus arctos holding on in such a forbidding niche. A remarkable text."

—Gary Snyder, Poet and Activist
