Chapter Ethics Exercise #4

Purpose:
1. Stretch your “consulting with integrity” muscles and build ethical sensitivity
2. Better know you colleagues and appreciate the diversity of their experience and perspectives

Introduction:
The IMC mission is to promote excellence and ethics in management consulting. Because most ethical issues fall into the gray zone, we are not always even aware of the full issues surrounding the attitudes, behaviors and impacts of our comments and actions. This exercise helps us see the blind spots we all have. Through discussion of these scenarios, we get to know our colleagues, and ourselves, a bit better.

Instructions:
We’ll read out loud the scenario below. Discuss among yourselves at each table for ten minutes considering the questions at the bottom of this page. We will give a one minute warning. Select a spokesperson to take 15 seconds to report your table’s conclusions. After all tables report out, we will spend a few minutes on discussion.

Sample Scenario:
An acquaintance calls you to assemble a team for a fast-track project to evaluate and recommend an alternative staffing and talent management strategy and processes for a 230-person hospitality management company. She has heard good things about you from two of your clients in other industries and about your core competence in process reengineering. However, she thinks you can provide what she needs over the next 3 months. She needs you to start right away so you agree.

You assemble a 4-person team starting with 1 person you regularly work with in process reengineering. You find two other consultants, a strategy expert and a forensic accountant. Although you have never worked with them, you know both professionally and you hear both are solid consultants. You meet the client and agree on the scope of work to assess talent management strategy, conduct personnel assessments and job fit analyses, train managers in personnel regulations and develop performance management systems and reporting dashboards.

You develop a work plan and, because the client insists on a fast pace, you parcel out the work and make it clear that you expect each team member to deliver their work products on schedule. This is to mirror the company culture of “We expect everyone to be an adult and get their work done.” However, your team is not aligned. Some are falling behind because the psychometric assessments, training and performance management systems are beyond their skill sets. You conclude that this is not the client’s problem, especially since she has told you to follow company culture and not bother her with problems.

As the project draws to a close, you think you have delivered a credible product. You arrive at the project debriefing and see your client has asked several others to join you – a human resources trainer, a psychometrician, and a personnel regulatory analyst.

Questions to Discuss:
1. Are there any ethics issues here or is this just the way fast-paced consulting engagements work?
2. Put yourself in the client’s position. What would she want you to do? To have done?
3. Did you do all you could as manager of the team to deliver the requested services?
4. What sections of the IMC USA Code of Ethics are relevant?
5. What additional information, if any, do you need to make a preliminary judgment about this case?
6. What do you recommend be done to resolve this issue? To have prevented it?
All IMC USA members pledge in writing to abide by the Institute's Code Ethics. Their adherence to the Code signifies voluntary assumption of self-discipline. As the professional association and certifying body for management consultants in the United States, IMC USA requires adherence to this Code of Ethics as a condition of membership and certification. The standards of conduct set forth in this Code provide basic principles in the ethical practice of management consulting. The purpose of this Code is to help IMC USA members maintain their professionalism and adhere to high ethical standards in the conduct of providing services to clients and in their dealings with their colleagues and the public. The individual judgment of Members is required to apply these principles. Members are liable to disciplinary action under the IMC USA Rules of Procedure for Enforcement of this Code if their conduct is found by the IMC USA Ethics Committee to be in violation of the Code or to bring discredit to the profession or to IMC USA.

My Commitment to My Clients

1.0 I will serve my clients with integrity, competence, independence, objectivity, and professionalism.

2.0 I will mutually establish with my clients realistic expectations of the benefits and results of my services.

3.0 I will only accept assignments for which I possess the requisite experience and competence to perform and will only assign staff or engage colleagues with the knowledge and expertise needed to serve my clients effectively.

4.0 Before accepting any engagement, I will ensure that I have worked with my clients to establish a mutual understanding of the objectives, scope, work plan, and fee arrangements.

5.0 I will treat appropriately all confidential client information that is not public knowledge, take reasonable steps to prevent it from access by unauthorized people, and will not take advantage of proprietary or privileged information, either for use by myself, the client's firm, or another client, without the client's permission.

6.0 I will avoid conflicts of interest or the appearance of such and will immediately disclose to the client circumstances or interests that I believe may influence my judgment or objectivity.

7.0 I will offer to withdraw from a consulting assignment when I believe my objectivity or integrity may be impaired.

8.0 I will refrain from inviting an employee of an active or inactive client to consider alternative employment without prior discussion with the client.

My Commitment to Fiscal Integrity

9.0 I will agree in advance with a client on the basis for fees and expenses and will charge fees that are reasonable and commensurate with the services delivered and the responsibility accepted.

10.0 I will not accept commissions, remuneration, or other benefits from a third party in connection with the recommendations to a client without that client's prior knowledge and consent, and I will disclose in advance any financial interests in goods or services that form part of such recommendations.

My Commitment to the Public and the Profession

11.0 If within the scope of my engagement, I will report to appropriate authorities within or external to the client organization any occurrences of malfeasance, dangerous behavior, or illegal activities.

12.0 I will respect the rights of consulting colleagues and consulting firms and will not use their proprietary information or methodologies without permission.

13.0 I will represent the profession with integrity and professionalism in my relations with my clients, colleagues, and the general public.

14.0 I will not advertise my services in a deceptive manner nor misrepresent or denigrate individual consulting practitioners, consulting firms, or the consulting profession.

15.0 If I perceive a violation of the Code, I will report it to the Institute of Management Consultants USA and will promote adherence to the Code by other member consultants working on my behalf.
