Our AIM has never wavered.

RID THE NATION OF VACCINE-PREVENTABLE DISEASE.

Join us and make a difference.
THE TARGET IS CLEAR. AND OUR RESOLVE IS UNWAVERING.

Influenza, measles and whooping cough. These and many other vaccine-preventable diseases continue to impact the lives of far too many family, neighbors and community members.

The Association of Immunization Managers (AIM) is dedicated to establishing a nation free of preventable disease. AIM members are the leaders of state, local and territorial immunization programs—directing the public health efforts designed to keep children and adults vaccinated and protected against disease. Since 1999, AIM has provided a national voice for immunization programs and a forum for Program Managers to learn from each other, confront challenges, and achieve success.

Since its inception, AIM has gathered and shared information with its members on policy implementation, legislative issues, programmatic success and more.

The Corporate Alliance Program provides critical support to AIM and its mission.

IMMUNIZATION PROGRAM MANAGERS.

The secret weapon in the battle against vaccine-preventable disease.

The immunization landscape is complex and ever-changing. Program requirements, funding levels, and staff are in flux, while technology evolves and new vaccines are developed. Successful navigation of this environment requires strong, empowered leaders, and trusted, proven partners.

Immunization Program Managers are central to the success of our nation’s immunization efforts. They provide vaccine, guidance and oversight to over 44,000 providers and physicians in the Vaccines for Children program. They do the hard and necessary work to build a national network of immunization information systems that track vaccinations, monitor progress, contain outbreaks, and inform consumers. Plus, they develop and implement strategies to ensure that immunization coverage rates remain high and that babies, adolescents, and adults are protected from disease.

A partnership with AIM is a connection to Immunization Program Managers.

Partnership with AIM through the Corporate Alliance Program provides meaningful and ongoing connection with the Program Managers. This partnership allows you to:

- Stay on top of changes in state and local program leadership and staff;
- Learn about shifting priorities, new requirements, and policy changes; and
- Share the latest information on evolving technology and new products.

A partnership with AIM also provides your company or organization with:

- Recognition of your corporation’s support of AIM and public health on the AIM website with your logo and link to relevant information;
- Insight into immunization program challenges and priorities; and
- Opportunities to collaborate with Program Managers.
Who exactly are the Immunization Program Managers?

Program Managers are the dynamic leaders of state, territorial, and local public health immunization programs.
