From: Centre for Philanthropy Spring Newsletter

“We are delighted that The New Fundraisers: Who Organises Charitable Giving in Contemporary Society?, the latest book by the Director of Centre for Philanthropy, Dr. Beth Breeze, has been awarded the 2018 AFP Skystone Partners Prize for Research on Fundraising and Philanthropy. The prize is given each year to the author or authors of a book that contributes substantially to the knowledge and understanding of fundraising or philanthropic behaviour.

Awarding the prize, the jury commented, “This excellent volume was selected because of its value as a research study that centres itself outside of the United States. Dr. Breeze’s book argues that fundraising is about much more than simply ‘raising funds’ by asking donors, as the process must also include the complex work of cultivation by the practitioner. We commend Dr. Breeze for strong research and an accessible book that can forward our field.”

Dr Breeze commented, “I am absolutely thrilled to be awarded the AFP Skystone Partners Research prize. The books written by previous winners are amongst the most treasured items on my bookshelf, so I am truly honoured to be in such company.”

Emotions for a Cause: How the Emotion Expression of Nonprofit Leaders Produces Follower Engagement and Loyalty | 有緣由的情緒：非營利組織領導者的情緒如何產生追隨者的參與和忠誠度

Anthony Silard; First Published November 1, 2017; pp. 304–324

Abstract: Although emotion and leadership is a flourishing topic in organizational research, little is known about the actual emotion-related leader behaviors within the context of nonprofit organizations. Through an inductive, multiple-case study drawing from 34 semi-structured interviews with individuals who have occupied leader and/or follower roles in nonprofits organizations, a meso-level framework emerges that delineates the mutually strengthening interplay of emotion-related leader behaviors and organizational display norms in the nonprofit sector. These norms favor the expression of positive emotion and proscribe the display of negative emotion. Nonprofit leaders who enact emotion-related behaviors congruent with these display norms generate the follower outcomes of engagement and loyalty. Implications for nonprofit leadership research and practice are discussed.

摘要：儘管情感和領導力是組織研究中一個蓬勃發展的話題，但我們對於非營利組織背景下與情緒有關的領導行為卻知之甚少。在這個歸納性的多案例研究中，我們進行了 34 個對非營利組織中擔任領導和/或追隨者角色的個人的半結構化訪談，梳理出一個中層框架，描繪了非營利部門中情緒相關的領導行為和組織展示規範之間彼此加強的相互作用。這些規範支持積極情緒的表達，並禁止消極情緒的表現。若非營利組織領導者表現與這些展示規範相符的情緒相關的行為，則會在追隨者中獲得更高的參與度和忠誠度。本文還討論了這一發現對非營利領導研究和實踐的啟示。

The Institutional Antecedents of Managerial Networking in Chinese Environmental NGOs | 中國環保非政府組織管理網絡的制度性前因

Hui Li, Shui-Yan Tang, Carlos Wing-Hung Lo; First Published December 18, 2017; pp. 325–346

Abstract: This study examines how various aspects of institutional context, including the regulatory environment, government affiliation, and government work experience, shape environmental nongovernmental organizations' (eNGOs) managerial networking in China. Data from a nationwide survey of 267 eNGOs and in-depth interviews in 2014-2015 are analyzed. The findings show that China's restrictive political environment suppresses eNGOs' peer and business networking but is not associated with government networking. Compared with government-organized NGOs (GONGOs), civic eNGOs network more with peers, businesses, and government agencies. Furthermore, eNGOs with leaders having government work experience conduct more government networking. Theoretically, these findings point to the importance of the political and institutional context of managerial networking. Empirically, this study provides the first set of quantitative data analysis demonstrating how institutional factors affect NGO managerial networking under authoritarianism.

摘要：本研究考察了制度環境的各個方面（包括監管環境，政府關係和政府工作經驗）如何影響中國的環境保護非政府組織（eNGOs）的管理網絡。研究對全國 267 個 eNGOs 的調查數據和 2014-2015 年的深度訪談數據進行了分析。調查結果顯示，中國高壓的政治環境限制了 eNGOs 與同行和企業發展網絡，但卻沒有影響其與政府的聯繫。但總的來說，公民自發的 eNGO 比官辦的非政府組織（GONGOs）更多與同行、企業和政府機構建立聯繫。此外，若 eNGO 的領導者具有政府工作經驗，則會更多地與政府建立聯繫。在理論層面，這些發現指出了管理網絡的政治和制度背景的重要性。在實證層面，這項研究提供了第一份展示了制度因素如何影響非政府組織在威權主義下的管理網絡的定量數據分析。

21-23 November 2018: Lisbon, Portugal | 2018年11月21-23日：葡萄牙里斯本

Submission: Please email paper abstracts of no more than 300 words to ssecommons.cei@iscte-iul.pt by May 31 2018. Acceptance and rejection notices will be sent in mid-June 2018.

In response to the current global social and environmental crisis, various social movements are developing alternatives to the socio-economic status quo by mobilizing endogenous practices, institutions and resources and networking among grassroots initiatives. Within these movements stands out Solidary Social Economy and the Commons. This international and interdisciplinary conference, guided by an action research strategy, aims to respond to challenges that have arisen from recent research on forms of shared governance between the state, the market and the third sector, promoted by movements and public policies for the Social Solidarity Economy, as well as criticisms made by authors such as Martin Deleixhe, David Harvey and Massimo de Angelis to the theory developed by Elinor Ostrom on the management of common property:

How to promote a strong sense of community belonging, necessary to promote the cooperation between stakeholders that is necessary for the harmonious governance of Social Solidarity Economy and the Commons, while preventing the emergence of totalizing visions, ensuring pluralism and promoting democratic deepening?

How to promote shared governance strategies between the state, the market and the third sector, which promote and guarantee the creation of Social Solidarity Economy networks as spaces of self-organization, in which participants can autonomously construct themselves as economic and political subjects?

How to promote organizations based on the constitution and / or management of Common Goods (Integral Cooperatives, Ecovillages, associations of users and / or producers, etc.) based on fair, inclusive and participative forms of governance, and integrated into grassroots socioeconomic dynamics?

The purpose of this event is to promote an inter-sectoral dialogue on this topic at the international level. We invite researchers, activists, public officials, social entrepreneurs and other actors in these fields to present communications that explore possible configurations which the convergence between the approaches proposed by the Solidarity Economy and Common Goods movements can assume in the following fields:

- Production and distribution of food, water and energy;
- Infrastructures (management of territories, means of communication and transport, information technologies, housing and economic and cultural activity spaces);
- Health, Education and Culture
- Financial systems (ethical finance, social currencies, crypto-coins).

The objective is to develop theoretical and empirical materials that facilitate convergence and the establishment of common action plans for the promotion of socially and environmentally resilient communities, in particular through:

- a) adaptation to climate change, transition to the use of renewable energies and promotion of "environmental ethics";
- b) public policies and participatory democracy mechanisms to promote social justice through empowerment and a more effective exercise of social, economic and civic rights by vulnerable social groups;
- c) The revitalization of local economies through "short circuits" of production and consumption that stimulate the creation of employment and the establishment of wealth at an autochthonous level.

'When Students Protest: Politics and Young People' | “當學生抗議：政治與年輕人”

Deadline for submission of abstract: May 14, 2018 | 摘要提交期限：2018年5月14日

Submission: We invite expressions of interest in the form of a 300-500-word abstract by Monday 14 May 2018 Please also add 3-line biography statement and your institutional affiliation.

Student action in 2018 is again featuring in the news from America this time focusing on anti-gun activism after another spate of killings of students on their campuses. This action is part of a broader pattern of student action occurring in other parts of the world, protesting e.g. student debt, authoritarian policies, sexual assault on campuses, or neo-liberal austerity policies, free speech, sexuality and gender equality.

We think it is timely to gather and publish research on this important aspect of contemporary political activity. We welcome contributions that document student political action in various forms from a diversity of perspectives, and we are particularly interested in insider-student-actor accounts with first-hand experience.

Student politics has a long and diverse history that has often changed our world. Our aim in this project is to document the various forms student political action takes by providing well researched accounts of it in Asia-Pacific, Europe and the Americas. This edited collection will inquire into the rich and diverse ways students have engaged in various forms of action in schools, colleges, universities, in youth groups and in their communities.

Given that politics is always a relational matter our primary aim is to highlight responses to student action and to consider what this means for politics. Understanding the political as agonistic and as relational practices implicating various resources (i.e. as 'power,' or in Bourdieu's terms as various forms of 'capital') we want to focus on what students do and on how others react and respond to them. In these ways the intention of this book is to emphasise the relational nature of our social world the shared nature of our lives and futures, and the value especially of developing solidarities across generations to deliberate about the desirable options and the actions to be taken to promote change.

In short, we want to concentrate on the forms that student action takes and on the different reactions to student political action. We ask that contributions reflect on how we might best understand such responses. How for example have education administrators, police, governments, conventional media, parents, NGOs and others responded to student political action-? Have governments used old laws or changed law or policy to control or repress student activism. Has state violence figured in responses to student activism? And-or have governments relied on digital surveillance, detention or subtler cultural processes. And, how can we best analyse and interpret these responses.

We ask contributors to document:

- What actions were taken by students?
- What technologies were deployed, and what forms of political expressivity was involved?
- How did young actors believe they can change ‘things’?
- What does it mean when students think and act politically?
- What have young students achieved through activism?
- What responses do student activism provoke?

While our focus will be on contemporary student politics, we would also welcome historical and or comparative contributions that place contemporary student political action into a broader perspective.

Our aim is to challenge conventional narratives that students and young people generally are too intellectually, socially, and morally immature to engage in the ‘serious business’ of politics. It is to challenge recent claims mounted as generational stories that contemporary students or so called ‘Millennials’, are apolitical, apathetic and politically unengaged.

We invite expressions of interest in the form of a 300-500-word abstract by Monday 14 May 2018 Please also add 3-line biography statement and your institutional affiliation.

We then invite author/s to submit the first draft of chapters (6,000-6,500 words including references) by February 2019 at the latest.

Our provisional schedule is:

Receive abstracts -chapter proposals by	14th May 2018
Selection and drafting of the book proposal
Submit a detailed proposal to the publisher	9th June 2018
Sign contract with Publisher	15th September 2018.
Deadline to receive first drafts of chapters	1st February 2019
Submit the final manuscript	November 2019
Publication	March-April 2020
