EDITOR’S NOTE | 編輯按

What a way to begin the 2020s. All I hope is that when we look back and reappraise this year, there will be more memories of kindness, gratitude, courage, and empathy than anxiety and feelings of uncertainty. We wish you and your loved ones stay well and connected in the coming weeks.

As many of you have already experience and hence won’t be surprised to find out that a lot of international academic events are being either cancelled or postponed, including our own Montreal conference originally scheduled in July. There are three ways you can use your registration fees. In the News sections, we will give you more updates.

If you are interested in conducting social scientific research related to COVID-19 and the third sector/civil society, please get in touch with us. You can provide information about your own projects, or you can express your interest in collaborating in future. We will try our best to build up a database or alike, or do a little academic ‘match-making’ within our own capacity. For example, Fengshi is in the process of applying for funding for two research grants to examine community responses and policies related to the ‘most vulnerable’. Please get in touch if you are also writing about this topic.

Bringing Politics Back in Charitable Giving: Evidence From Donations After China’s Sichuan Earthquake
| 將政治帶回到慈善捐贈： 來自中國四川地震後捐贈的證據

Ming Li, Ran Tao, Fubing Su

Abstract: Do non-Westerners donate differently? Drawing on a unique survey after the 2008 Sichuan earthquake, this article reports some empirical findings about Chinese donation behavior. Our empirical analysis confirms the importance of various socioeconomic factors in charitable giving. What distinguishes the Chinese case from other societies is the role of politics. Political attitudes affect how people donate: Less trustful individuals and less dependent communities do not embrace state-centered charity enthusiastically. Our research expands the spatial coverage of the charity study that is dominated by experiences and practices from European and North American countries. To generate hypotheses about political attitudes, we develop a simple political model of charity. Placing politicians’ survival motivation at the center opens up new inquiries that are underexplored by current literature. It also inspires further research into comparative institutional designs of charity across national boundaries.

Grassroots resistance to energy project encroachment: Analyzing environmental mobilization against the Keystone XL Pipeline | 草根對能源項目侵佔的抵抗：分析 Keystone XL 管道項目的環境動員

Brock Ternes, James Ordner & David Heath Cooper

Abstract: The rapid expansion of the oil and gas industry, driven by intentional energy policy decisions which unlock growth, represents a distinct threat to community safety. In response to this encroaching energy landscape, localized mobilizations have emerged. While the tactics of these social movements are important, this article focuses on their concern of protecting shared natural resources. Using the grassroots opposition to the Keystone XL pipeline in rural Nebraska as a case study, we highlight how neoliberal policies and environmentally risky energy projects have facilitated civil society coalition-building to protect natural resources and fight climate change. Historically, social movements have been driven by strong civic activism and progressive organizing efforts. This article asks: are localized, goal-oriented movements more likely to form stronger civic ties than the greater environmental movement? Landowner concern about the risks associated with pipeline were not enough to mobilize farmers, ranchers, and concerned citizens; it took the organizing efforts of the grassroots civil society organization Bold Nebraska to unify landowners and communities along the pipeline’s route. Utilizing extensive fieldwork focused on the Keystone XL opposition movement in Nebraska, this study argues that environmental movements based on local coalitions have the potential to fortify future environmental protection.

摘要：在能源政策有意的推動下，石油和天然氣行業的快速擴張對社區安全構成了明顯的威脅。為了應對這種侵略性的能源形勢，地方性的動員隨之出現。儘管這些社會運動的策略很重要，本文關注的重點是這些社會運動對保護共享自然資源的關注。以在 Nebraska 農村地區的草根組織反對 Keystone XL 管道項目為案例，我們強調了新自由主義政策和具有環境風險的能源項目如何促進公民社會建立聯盟以保護自然資源並應對氣候變化。從歷史上看，社會運動受強大的公民行動和積極的組織努力的推動。這篇文章想瞭解，與更大的環境運動相比，本地化的、以目標為導向的運動更有可能形成強大的公民紐帶嗎？土地所有者對於管道項目相關風險的關注不足以動員農民、牧場主和其他相關的公民。Bold Nebraska, 一家草根公民社會組織，做出了努力去團結管道沿線的土地所有者和社區。基於在 Nebraska 開展的關於 Keystone XL 反對運動的田野調查，這項研究認為，基於地方聯盟的環境運動有可能加強未來的環境保護。

Professor Kinman Chan has been released from prison! | 陳健民教授出獄

Professor Kinman Chan has been released from prison in Hong Kong after 16 months of imprisonment by the Hong Kong Court on April 24, 2019 for “inciting” and “conspiring” to cause public nuisance during the pro-democracy Umbrella Movement in 2014.  Kinman served 326 days in Pik Uk Prison.

We are grateful that Dr. Chan, a member of the board of directors of ISTR, will be reunited with his family today. Throughout his long academic career, Kinman Chan has been committed to promoting peaceful action for universal suffrage as stipulated in the Basic Law of Hong Kong and to supporting the fundamental freedoms of expression, association and assembly for all citizens.  His scholarship on civil society is widely recognized throughout the academic community. In his final lecture at the Chinese University in Hong Kong in April 2019, prior to his imprisonment, Chan declared that he was prepared to go to prison. "So long as we are not crushed by the trial and the prison sentence, and we do not become depressed or angered, then we will come out stronger... Yes, we may need to go to jail, but those in power may not win - those who send you to jail may not win." Speaking then of the great support that he had received, Chan concluded, "It makes me believe in the good in people - it is our hope.  I hope you do not give up - we see only the stars in the darkest hours." ISTR today welcomes back the bright star of Professor Chan to the academic firmament.

Handbook on Corporate Foundations: Corporate and Civil Society Perspectives | 企業基金會手冊：企業與公民社會的視角

Edited by Lonneke RozaSteffen BethmannLucas MeijsGeorg von Schnurbein

Companies increasingly play a meaningful role in civil society and the philanthropic sector through Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) and Corporate Philanthropy (CP). The most well studied form of allocating these resources is through outright contributions to operating external foundations and other nonprofit organizations. However, far less is known about the use of corporate foundations, separate and independent nonprofit entities aimed at channeling corporate giving to a social mission related to a company.

Corporate foundations are often linked to the founding company through their name, funding, trustees, administration and potential employee involvement. As these foundations are growing in number, size and importance and becoming increasingly visible in the philanthropic sector, the urgency to understand their role and functioning becomes more important. The primary aim of this volume is to deliver a holistic analysis of the current state-of-the-art on corporate foundations. For that reason, the book includes different perspectives on and use a hybrid concept of corporate foundations. First, it addresses different levels of understanding: regional or country level, institutional context, and organizational level. Additionally, it analyzes the corporate foundation on the organizational level. Looking further into the organizational processes of corporate foundations, the book also analyzes governance, operations, and impact as major aspects of organizational performance. Global Health and Volunteering: A Guide for Healthcare Professionals is designed to educate volunteers to be effective partners in delivering medical services locally and globally. Healthcare professionals are increasingly interested in global health and volunteering in areas of acute need. The biggest challenge to health in many locales is the inability to access the health care system. When people do connect with medical services, medications and surgical opportunities for chronic disease (i.e. glaucoma, diabetes, or hypertension) are often not affordable or cannot be sustained for a long period of time. The contributions in this book focus on a respectful dialog with local people and a willingness to learn from new experiences on the part of the volunteer. Skills transfer from visiting personnel to local providers is featured as a means to enhance healthcare sustainability. An appreciation of differing cultures, an understanding of the local economic conditions and challenges, and strategies for collaborating with the existing medical establishment are foundations of successful volunteer experiences as highlighted in this book. Dimensions of global health such as professionalism, religious beliefs, ethical dilemmas, traditional medicine, and alternative strategies for service are addressed by experts. Cultivating and Retaining Donors, Members, and Volunteers

Deadline for submission: June 15 2020 | 提交截止：2020 年 6 月 15 日

Manuscripts that further our knowledge on cultivating and retaining support from donors, members, and volunteers are encouraged. Rethinking Control and Trust Dynamics in Organizations Expanding our Understanding of Formal and Informal Mechanisms of Collaboration across Levels of Analysis

Deadline for submission: November 1 2020 | 提交截止：2020 年 11 月 1 日

The purpose of this Special Issue is to showcase research examining both the workings and effects generated by organizational governance systems comprised of formal and informal mechanisms of control (monitoring, contracting, and performance management) as well as various forms of trust-enhancing activities (including calculative, relational, and institutional trust).
The goal for this Special Issue is to encourage management scholars in the field to conduct broad and deep examinations of the fundamental, complex and often conflicting psychological, sociological and economic factors influencing organizational control-trust dynamics (Long and Sitkin, 2018; Lumineau, 2017). It aims to help resolve decades-old theoretical dilemmas that have persisted in this area, such as when control and trust serve as substitutes and complements, when controls can be used to build trust, and when trust is and is not a form of control (Bradach and Eccles, 1989). The Special Issue encourages scholars to develop theory and evidence about such interactions, in order to provide more accurate and complete pictures of the contextual tapestry within which control-trust dynamics occur.
