Conference Details

Welcome to the Seventh International Conference of the International Society for Third-Sector Research (ISTR).

ISTR would like to thank our host, the Center for Philanthropy and Civil Society at the National Institute of Development Administration.

As Thai society develops and becomes more complex, there is a growing need for greater public understanding of and participation in the third sector. The Center for Philanthropy and Civil Society (CPCS) recognizes this and aims to encourage philanthropy and civil society movements in Thailand. CPCS is an autonomous, nonprofit center under the National Institute of Development Administration (NIDA)—a government institution of higher learning at the post-graduate level. The Center was founded on March 19, 1997 and grew out of a series of exploratory studies and research, seminars and meetings focusing on the not-for-profit sector. CPCS aims to strengthen the third sector as a significant force for the promotion of balanced and sustainable development and the achievement of a civil society characterized by equity and a shared concern for the common good.

CPCS conducts studies and research on issues and problems of the third sector; acts as a data center about the third sector in Thailand; coordinates activities and programs of organizations in the third sector both locally and abroad; provides training and consultation services for organization in the third sector; plays an advocacy role for the third sector with the government, seeking to improve the sector's legal status and coordinates the sector's role with the programs of government; and promotes public understanding, recognition, and support of the third sector among the Thai people so as to increase broad popular acceptance of and participation in the not-for-profit sector's activities through educational programs, mass media, and other channels.

“Civil Society and Human Security: Raum Jai”

The theme of the 2006 conference is “Civil Society and Human Security: Raum Jai*.”

The world is preoccupied with issues of security where civil society, the Third Sector, is implicated in this at every level, as protagonist, victim, advocate and potential solution. The seventh international conference in Bangkok therefore provides an opportunity to share and explore scholarship that addresses issues of local, national, regional and global (in)security. We wish to explore the many sides of (in)security, from the response to natural disasters to the defense of human rights, and the search for broader civil society engagement.

Raum Jai, meaning putting our hearts together. Jai (heart) in Thai cultural values is very important. It connotes sincere, altruistic, committed and humanistic dimensions of human motivations and behaviors.*

This seventh ISTR international conference provides an impetus and a forum for scholars and practitioners to grapple with these profound features of global (in)security. Specifically, it will challenge those interested in this field of knowledge and action to examine the implications of contending global forces and for the nature and roles of the Third Sector. It offers an opportunity to discuss theoretical and empirical insights, to identify vital areas for new enquiry and to establish contacts with those with similar interests.

It is our hope that this conference theme will inspire stimulating debate and discussion, and create exciting collaborations. We look forward to this global gathering of colleagues for a dynamic academic, networking, and social experience.

ISTR would like to thank the following organizations for their generous support of the Seventh International Conference in Bangkok, Thailand.
