

JPMA Walker & Activity Center Position Statement

October 1, 2018

Walkers and activity centers have strict ASTM standards and meet current CPSC requirements. These standards have been effective at reducing potential injuries by 90%. These products are safe when used correctly and can also help keep babies away from other household hazards. Parents should retain the choice to use safe products they want for the care, protection and enjoyment of their children. JPMA always advises parents to never leave a child unattended and always follow the manufacturer's instructions when using products with their child.
