Statement on Covid-19 for the public from Kansas Restaurant & Hospitality Association

The Kansas Restaurant & Hospitality Association recognizes that the health and safety of our citizens is a top priority, but it doesn't have to come at the expense of a vibrant restaurant and hospitality industry.

As you make plans to adjust your life to account for the health risks facing our community, I encourage you to consider supporting the 130,000+ Kansans that serve you in the hospitality industry. Without your support, local businesses will close, jobs will be lost, and families will struggle.

Our member businesses work hard to follow guidelines set forth by the State of Kansas and its regulating authorities with high standards of safety and sanitization as an everyday practice. In addition, the Kansas Restaurant & Hospitality Association has been providing availability to best practices and resources from the CDC, World Health Organization and other top health professionals to ensure further steps are being taken as necessary.

If you are not comfortable being in public places, please remember that you can order your favorite dishes as take away or use the many delivery services available to bring meals to your door.

Don't ignore the circumstances but take advantage of the opportunities you have to safely press the pause button, have some fun and support Kansans who are committed to being at your service!
