About:

This is a one-day seminar designed for personnel who are employed within law enforcement agencies as clerical support, administrative assistants, or various other support roles. The purpose is to increase the attendee's job efficiency, as well as create better relationships with supervisors, co-workers, and the general public.

Although this seminar is designed for personnel within law enforcement agencies, the information has an application for support personnel in various governmental departments such as finance and code enforcement, among others. The seminar will look at the many important roles that support personnel have, which contribute to the success of their organization's goals and objectives.

Topics covered include:

- Their role within the organization and how they contribute to the overall goals of the organization
- The importance of knowing what the administrator/supervisor expects
- Recognizing the significance of understanding the community dynamics and influence actors
- How to deal with disgruntled and angry citizens, and ways to ease tempers and tensions
- Internal forces that can create pressure and tension within an organization
- When you should or should not speak for the chief/director
- Ways to improve your verbal communications skills and words that can calm or increase tensions
- Handling ethical dilemmas
- Liability issues that may impact your position
- Ways to handle confidential matters/information
- Basic conflict resolution techniques
