

Shared Branching: Convenience and Access to Suit a Busy Lifestyle

Its 7:00 a.m. and you are already frazzled from all it's taken just to get out of the house. You stop for some much needed coffee at the bistro along the way to work. It's different from your Saturday morning java routine, but a great alternative on the path to the office.

Lunch time rolls around and you find yourself on the hunt for something to satisfy that mid-day hunger, but you also have to squeeze in time to run some errands. While en route, you find a delicious little sandwich shop positioned adjacent to the grocery store you are visiting.

Work has come to a close and the dart to the family's evening activities begins. You hop in your car and notice it's time to fill up. You pull into the gas station around the corner from your job. It's not the same one you use when close to home...this is the work week gas station.

There's a common theme in choices made for our day to day activities...convenience! Time is of the essence and the more accessible your options, the easier your life becomes.

Shared branching offers this same level of accessibility and convenience.
