A few weeks ago, I had the opportunity to join a group of legal and judicial experts to participate in the Children’s Bureau’s first ever Court Improvement Program (CIP) Talks event. I hope many of you viewed it live or have taken a look at the recording. It was a real pleasure to get to know the other presenters; each and every talk drove home the importance of the roles that judges and attorneys — for parents, children, and the child welfare agency — play in strengthening families. Although I entered my role in federal government with a deep appreciation of how important the legal and judicial community is to a well-functioning child welfare system, the CIP Talks experience and the messages delivered that day strengthen my conviction even more.

It is clear to me that outcomes for children and families simply will not improve without active lawyering and truly informed judicial decision-making. Ensuring that the voices of parents and children are heard at all times, pre-, during and post-hearings and reviews has clear benefits for all involved. Those benefits include a more complete understanding of family strengths, needs, and resources; increased levels of engagement by parents, children and youth; and greater depth and breadth of useful information on which a judge may base her decision. To be clear, each of these benefits directly and positively affects the child welfare agency.

The work that attorneys do helps identify resources such as kinship or respite placements; it helps identify services and supports that parents actually need and may be more likely to benefit from; can help reduce the likelihood that removal is necessary; and reduce the time that a child spends in out-of-home placement. These were goals that I sought to achieve as a former child welfare agency director, as a consultant working to help states improve outcomes for children and families, and those for which I will do everything I can to support from the federal level. This commitment is reflected in and supported by the President’s proposed budget.

In hearing the messages delivered during the CIP Talks from Carlyn Hicks, Don Duquette, and others, the work of the legal and judicial community is clear.

About the Authors:

Jerry Milner, D.S.W., is the Associate Commissioner at the Children’s Bureau, and the Acting Commissioner for the Administration on Children, Youth and Families. Jerry began his career as a case-carrying social worker, served as the state child welfare director in Alabama, and previously worked for the Children’s Bureau designing and implementing the CFSR. Immediately prior to his appointment, he served as the Vice President for Child Welfare Practice at the Center for the Support of Families.

David P. Kelly, JD, MA, is Special Assistant to Commissioner Milner and oversees the Children’s Bureau work with courts and the legal community, including the State and Tribal Court Improvement Programs, and other efforts to build state and tribal court capacity and improve legal representation.
It’s time for child welfare attorneys to recognize explicitly that we should be working toward the same outcome in the overwhelming majority of cases. As attorneys, it’s critical that we recognize that what we do in the space before and between hearings is pivotal — engagement with our clients cannot be episodic and restricted to preparation for and participation in hearings. How we go about our work makes a difference. Let’s give our clients the same level of respect and attention a high-paying private client would receive from a prestigious law firm. Let’s ask our clients what they would like to achieve, what is important to them, what would be helpful, and how they’d like to get there. Let’s be proactive, and let’s agree to work with urgent civility. Strong advocacy need not be adversarial when we stay connected to our common charge. Attorneys and judges can have a profound impact on preventing maltreatment and reducing unnecessary removals, and can do so with a simple change of approach. Every conversation we have out of court and every opportunity we have to speak on the record is a chance to keep a family together or reunite them sooner. Let’s recommit to asking if removal is truly necessary in the first place — and what we can do to ameliorate safety concerns; let’s recommit to making sure kinship placement is always the placement of first resort and aggressively pursuing kinship care; let’s commit to paying well-being the attention it deserves no matter what the circumstances or how inconvenient it may be to the professionals in the room. The CIP Talks that were mentioned at the opening of this article are a reminder of just how common our commitments are and a call to action we can answer today.

Policy Update

- NACC recently signed on to an amicus brief in a case before the Washington Supreme Court, In re: the Dependency of S.K.-P, arguing that children have a presumptive right to counsel in all dependency proceedings. On March 20, 2018 the Washington Supreme Court heard oral arguments in the case. Those arguments are archived and available here.

- The NACC policy department is working with the Annie E. Casey Foundation involving its “Every Kid Needs a Family” initiative. Last year, NACC partnered with the ABA to create an attorney advocacy tool to assist attorneys in understanding and making arguments to ensure that children are placed in family settings as opposed to congregate care. As the second part of this initiative, NACC is creating a pilot workgroup of 10-12 Child Welfare Law Specialist (CWLS) attorneys to use the toolkit in court hearings and to meet monthly via video or phone conference, to discuss the use of the toolkit. If you are interested in being a part of this pilot workgroup, please review the toolkit and send us a cover letter explaining your interest as well as your resume. Applications will be accepted through April 2018 and the workgroup will convene in late May or early June 2018. Materials should be addressed to Brooke.Silverthorn@naccchildlaw.org.

- NACC is also working on several proposals to engage in policy related initiatives in partnership with other organizations. If you are interested in collaborating with NACC on a policy initiative, or if you would like NACC to support your local efforts, please reach out to Brooke Silverthorn, Director of Legal and Policy Advocacy at Brooke.Silverthorn@naccchildlaw.org. NACC is interested in a range of issues related to child welfare and juvenile justice. To learn more about NACC’s policy priorities, check out NACC’s policy agenda.
The top leaders in child welfare, juvenile justice, and family law are coming to San Antonio!

Join the national community of multidisciplinary advocates working to make this country a better place for children, youth, and families at the 41st National Child Welfare, Juvenile Justice, and Family Law Conference, August 23–25, 2018, at the San Antonio Marriott Rivercenter.

NACC is Thrilled to Announce This Year’s Keynote Speakers

Jerry Milner, D.S.W., is the Associate Commissioner at the Children's Bureau, and the Acting Commissioner for the Administration on Children, Youth and Families of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and will be the opening keynote speaker.

Sixto Cancel, founder and CEO of Think of Us, will be the keynote speaker at NACC’s Annual Luncheon.

Advance Conference Agenda

In addition to these incredible keynote speakers, click here to see the Advance Conference Agenda detailing the faculty and presentations at this year’s conference. The full brochure will be released later this spring.

CWLS Application Fee Discount for NACC Members!

Attention, NACC members! If you’ve been thinking about becoming a certified Child Welfare Law Specialist, now is the time! NACC members who submit their CWLS application and fee during the month of April get an additional discount off the already-reduced application fee. Instead of the current $350 application fee, NACC members can apply for only $300! This application fee includes all exam costs as well as a copy of Child Welfare Law and Practice, 3rd Edition (the Red Book).

Please visit our website to download the application and then make your application payment online. Don’t forget to use Discount Code 18CWLSMEMB when checking out!

2018 CWLS Exam Season Now Open – Introducing Remote Proctoring!

The 2018 CWLS exam is now available. CWLS applicants who wish to take the exam in 2018 are able to self-schedule any time between now and mid-December. All exams can be taken from the comfort of your own home and will be remotely proctored via webcam by our partner, Examity. NACC is sending additional information and specific instructions to current CWLS applicants by email.

General exam information and resources can be found on our website.

CWLS Recertification and Early-Bird Rate

If you were originally certified as a CWLS in 2008 or 2013, then it’s time to recertify! Recertification is necessary once every five years in order to maintain your specialist credential. The process is similar to the initial application, minus the exam and writing sample. CWLS who are due for recertification in 2018 will be notified via email.

Early birds who submit their recertification application and fee between April 1st and May 31st can get the early-bird rate of $200 rather than the standard $300 fee of submissions on or after June 1st. Please visit the recertification page on our website.

Congratulations to these new CWLS!

So long, Sara!
We will miss you!

After ten years with NACC, our own Sara Whalen will soon be moving on to new adventures, having earned her master’s degree in early childhood education. Sara has worn many hats at NACC over the past decade including membership director, conference co-director, human resources expert, accounting liaison, training coordinator, graphic design guru, organizer extraordinaire, interior decorator, Snickers supplier, and horticulturist — all the office plants would be dead if it weren’t for her. And that doesn’t even cover everything — she’s also a fabulous mom, a photographer, a roller derby queen, a practical joker, and a collector of traditional witches’ brooms. You don’t run across a Sara Whalen every day.

Sara has been with NACC through so many changes over the years. This particular change will be a sad one in many ways but joyful in others. We will miss Sara’s work ethic and talents, but also her unique style, humor, patience, dedication, perseverance, and affirmative attitude. However, we know that she will bring these qualities to her new career and have a lasting, positive impact on the world of early childhood education, just as she has here at NACC. For that, we are happy.

Sara always leaves things better (and cleaner!) than when she found them, and NACC is lucky to have found Sara ten years ago.

We wish you the best of luck, Sara!
— The NACC Team

If you’d like to send her your well-wishes personally, email her soon at Sara.Whalen@NACCchildlaw.org.

Welcome Meryl!

Please join us in welcoming NACC’s new Business & Operations Manager Meryl Icove. Meryl brings decades of administrative experience in membership, community based programs, special events, and more! Meryl received her BA from Cornell University and her JD from the University of Pennsylvania Law School. She will be taking over the administrative side of Membership, supporting Conference, and managing NACC’s office operations. You can reach Meryl at Meryl.Icove@NACCchildlaw.org.

our website to download recertification materials. The $200 rate will be valid through May 31st and can be paid online here.

Annual CWLS Disclosure of Conduct Report and Fee

Your 2018 annual CWLS Disclosure of Conduct report and $120 fee can now be submitted online through NACC’s quick-file process. Simply answer the three conduct questions and submit payment, and you’ll be all set for the year! If you were certified or recertified in 2018, or are currently in the process of recertification, you do not owe an annual report or fee for 2018.

Submit your report and fee by “registering” for the 2018 CWLS Annual Report “event” on NACC’s website. Reminders will be sent periodically throughout the rest of the year until you’ve completed it, so the sooner you submit it, the fewer annoying messages you’ll get!

CWLS Expertise Needed!

NACC’s 40th Anniversary Celebration Continues!

NACC is offering all Bronze, Silver, and Gold members the opportunity to renew or extend your membership for one year at a 40% discount. Whether your membership expires this month or next year, we will add 12 months of membership when you renew during our 40 for 40 Celebration!

This is also a great time for members to elevate their membership level to Silver or Gold and receive the 3rd edition of NACC’s Child Welfare Law and Practice (aka The Red Book)! Silver members receive a soft cover copy (regularly $79 for members), and Gold members receive a hard cover copy (regularly $119 for members).

Renew/extend/upgrade your membership now!

This spring, NACC is offering the Silver Spring Special at 50% off regular pricing. For $100 you can receive a Silver Membership and a soft cover copy of the Red Book. Use code SSS2018 during online checkout or download the PDF form and return via mail. For Bronze Memberships use code NACC40.

Georgia Practitioners

NACC is pleased to announce a renewed partnership with the Georgia Association of Counsel for Children (GACC). For $75 you can join both GACC and NACC. Use code GACCBRONZE at checkout.

NACC Mission

As a multidisciplinary membership organization, we work to strengthen legal advocacy for children and families by:

- Ensuring that children and families are provided with well resourced, high quality legal advocates when their rights are at stake
- Implementing best practices by providing certification, training, education, and technical assistance to promote specialized high quality legal advocacy
- Advancing systemic improvement in child-serving agencies, institutions and court systems
- Promoting a safe and nurturing childhood through legal and policy advocacy for the rights and interests of children and families

The Guardian is an NACC publication.
