Financing Helps Business Survive The Pandemic

eTT Aviation was established by Thomas LaJoie, a former airline pilot. The company’s software streamlines operations and brings efficiencies to trip and shift trading for airline employees. To grow, the company needed a larger building to support an increase in staff. Due to the pandemic’s effect on the airline industry, they were not able to secure financing until they turned to the SBA. With a 504 they purchased a new building to support their growth plan. The borrower shared, “Thank you for not turning your back on small businesses. Thank you for not changing your rules to make it even tougher for us to survive during the pandemic like so many others have done. Thank you for being a positive influence on business growth.”

Dentist Rebuilds After Fire Takes Business

In 2018, the Paradise California wildfires ripped through town and destroyed everything including Jeremy Chatfield’s dental practice and home. Rather than start over in California, the Chatfield family decided to relocate to Idaho. Jeremy opened Just Breathe DDS, a dental sleep apnea and breathing wellness practice which integrated his passion for treating patients with sleep apnea. Since Dr. Chatfield was starting from scratch, he was not eligible for conventional financing. The SBA 504 Program was the answer to help him purchase and renovate his new office. Jeremy and his family love their new location and are thrilled to live in an area surrounded by beautiful lakes and snowy hills. They have found a new Paradise.
