Since 1929, NALS has been engaging members of the legal community and adding credibility and marketability to their careers.

NALS is led by members in the legal profession and consistently listens to the needs of its members, making the necessary adjustments to continue to meet your needs as your career evolves.

By adhering to a Code of Ethics, NALS members stand out in the legal community as leaders with qualities employers desire in their employees.

NALS Code of Ethics and Professional Responsibility
Members of NALS are bound by the objectives of this association and the standards of conduct required of the legal profession.

Every member shall:

• Encourage respect for the law and the administration of justice;
• Observe rules governing privileged communications and confidential information;
• Promote and exemplify high standards of loyalty, cooperation, and courtesy;
• Perform all duties of the profession with integrity and competence; and
• Pursue a high order of professional attainment.

For more information on the standards of conduct and code of ethics, visit NALS.org/About.
