Elevate Social Work: Conference 2019

Thursday’s Focus: Technology and Social Work

By Kate Shepard
MBA/MSW Candidate 2019
Student Intern, NASW-MD Chapter

It is that time of year again and we at NASW-MD are looking forward to Social Work Month. On March 28th and 29th social workers from across the state and region will arrive in Baltimore to learn from experts in various fields, share their experiences, and elevate their practice. It is fitting that this year Elevate Social Work is the theme for Social Work Month. This campaign focuses on valuing the field of social work and recognizing social workers. In practice, this theme opens discussions of key issues such as social work pay (which historically has not kept pace with other helping professions). In order to see social work salaries increase we must first elevate our work and recognize the vital role social workers play in complex systems such as government services, substance use treatment, poverty alleviation and prevention, physical and mental health, schools, social justice, and much more.

This may be a challenge for many social workers because while we feel our work is important, we are quick to highlight our clients’ strength and skill separate from ourselves. Additionally, many social workers’ success comes when things don’t happen (someone doesn’t use a substance, doesn’t come back to a hospital, doesn’t fail a class) which is difficult to track quantitatively and difficult to connect directly to the actions of one person. The benefit of our work may be felt years or even decades after an intervention. Let us spend this March celebrating our work, the dedication of the incredible people we work with, and the privilege it is to be a part of our clients’ journeys.

Dr. Darla Coffey will kick off the conference on Thursday morning with her keynote titled Health Beyond Healthcare: Elevating the Role of Social Work. Discussing social determinants of health has gained ground in recent years and Dr. Coffey describes this as “quintessentially [a] social work ‘space.’” This provides an opportunity for social workers to take the lead and use our skills to bridge the gap that can exist between hospitals, doctors and clients, and communities. The intersection of systems, institutions, history, social justice, inequality, communities and individuals is what social workers do.

Dr. Coffey is passionate about the social work profession as a social worker herself, but also as the President and Chief Executive Officer of the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE), she is integral in preparing the next generation of social workers. She earned her BSW from Eastern College, her MSW at the University of Pennsylvania, and her PhD from Bryn Mawr. Before returning to the field of social work education she worked at several universities, at an acute care in-patient psychiatric hospital, and as a clinical social worker in private practice.

She has received multiple honors for her work including the Advocate for Human Rights Award by the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences at Case Western Reserve University, the Political Advocacy Leadership Award given by the Congressional Research Institute for Social Work and Policy, and being named a Distinguished Fellow in the National Academies of Practice. We are excited and honored to hear her thoughts about the social work profession in the healthcare field.

Dr. Coffey’s remarks will open the conference and begin a day focused on social work as a profession and how social work interacts with technology in multiple spaces. Sessions will address how social work is impacted by social media, the complicated issues within electronic social work and telemental health, and cyberbullying. Friday will feature a wide variety of workshops and the annual awards luncheon celebrating the social worker of the year.

The Social Work Workforce in Maryland

By Daphne McClellan, PhD, MSW

In October, NASW-MD sponsored a Meeting of the Profession regarding the social work workforce in Maryland. The Children’s Guild kindly provided space for the event which was designed to start the conversation about what issues are of concern to social workers in our state. The program included a welcome by the executive director of NASW, a keynote presentation by Susan Westgate, and a panel discussion of social work practice areas moderated by Dr. Michael Reisch. Following the formal presentations the social work leaders in attendance divided into break-out table discussions to focus more specifically on areas of interest.

In the spirit of this year’s theme Elevate Social Work, the attention to workforce issues will remain a focus of our chapter. At the inaugural gathering a number of workforce issues were identified: 1) The Status of the Profession; 2) Staffing/Retention/Burnout; 3) Defining Clinical Practice; 4) Issues for Macro Practitioners; 5) Social Workers gaining parity as Substance Abuse treatment providers; 6) Licensing and Regulation; and 7) Issues for Bachelor Social Workers. Those in attendance indicated areas they would like to work on as task forces are formed.

There will be multiple opportunities for social workers from around the state to weigh in and become involved in these issues. One such opportunity will be at our annual conference in March. On Thursday morning following the keynote there will be four breakout sessions to hear presentations specifically focused on social work practice areas. The sessions will include plenty of time for group discussion.

Follow-up meetings on each of the areas identified are being planned, and interested participants are being sought from around the state. Involvement at all levels of our profession will result in the best strategies and outcomes. Please contact dmc@naswmd.org to indicate your interest and to be put on an email list for further workforce activities. Let’s work together to ELEVATE SOCIAL WORK!
Social Worker’s Response: Examining workforce issues to addressing the opioid epidemic in Maryland

As Daphne mentioned in her article, Addiction and the SW Workforce is one of our priority topics to address this year. Oversed deaths continue to rise across the state with little evidence of slowing down. According to the 2017 Maryland Department of Health Annual report on Unintentional Drug- and Alcohol-Related Intoxication Deaths in Maryland, the total number of overdose deaths has increased significantly from 815 in 2007 to well over 2,000 in 2017 with Baltimore City reporting significantly more (761) deaths than any other jurisdiction. The report also indicates that overdose related deaths are increasing in all demographic categories (age, race, gender) as well as jurisdictions. It should not be surprising that opioid related overdose deaths are leading with Fentanyl (1594) and Heroin (5078) significantly contributing to the total numbers. As the number of deaths increased, Maryland has been working to address this issue using several large scale public health approaches:

- January 2013, developed and implemented Opioid Overdose Prevention Plan- a statewide strategy for reducing overdose deaths related to pharmaceutical opioids and heroin. The plan’s state goal is to reduce unintentional overdoses involving opioids, such as prescription painkillers and heroin.
- December 2013, fully launched Prescription Drug Monitoring Program (PDMP) - the Maryland PDMP aims to reduce prescription drug misuse and diversion by creating a secure database of all Schedule II-V controlled dangerous substances (CDS) prescribed and dispensed in Maryland.
- October 1, 2014, HB 1282 established Overdose Fatality Review (OFR) Teams modeled on other mortality review teams and established as medical review committees. OFRs comprise multi-agency/multi-disciplinary members that conduct confidential case reviews of overdose deaths with the goal of preventing future deaths.
- February 24, 2015, established Maryland heroin and opioid task force and inter-agency coordinating council. “The purpose of the inter-agency council and task force is to connect the dots of prevention, treatment, and recovery and maximize our resources and expertise to come up with real solutions to save and restore lives.”
- October 1, 2015, established Good Samaritan Law (limited criminal immunity) - provides protection from arrest as well as prosecution for specific crimes and expands the charges from which people suffering in an emergency overdose situation are immune.
- October 1, 2015- Expanded access to Naloxone in Maryland through new law-Physicians, advanced practice nurses, dentists, and other providers with prescribing authority can prescribe Naloxone to any individual who is believed to be at risk of experiencing an opioid overdose or in a position to assist an individual at potential risk of an opioid overdose. This means that Marylanders can go directly to their provider to get naloxone and get educated on how to use it to save someone’s life.
- January 24, 2017, established Opioid Operational Command Center. The center facilitates greater collaboration between state and local public health, human services, education, and public safety entities to reduce the harmful impacts of opioid addiction on Maryland communities.
- March 1, 2017, Governor Larry Hogan signed Executive Order 01.01.2017.02 declaring a State of Emergency in response to the heroin, opioid, and fentanyl crisis ravaging communities in Maryland and across the country. This declaration activates the governor’s emergency management authority and enables increased and more rapid coordination between the state and local jurisdictions.

Understanding a vital social work workforce

With the nationwide growing epidemic, many social work professional organizations have been looking at the current workforce and examining the role of social workers in addressing the opioid crisis. According to Marylou Sudders, “Almost every front-line social worker will engage with a client struggling with substance use disorder or a family with a loved one struggling over the course of their career… They must be equipped with the best clinical tools to help clients navigate a path to treatment and recovery.” As we continue to better understand the opioid crisis, NASW-MD has also engaged in this process to gain a better understanding of the current workforce and ensure the needs of social workers in Maryland are being met. We are engaged in this process on several levels in order to provide ongoing recommendations, resources, and trainings to assist social workers with professional development and continuing education opportunities.

Educational Efforts to addressing the opioid epidemic

Within Maryland, there are several BSW and MSW programs that provide ongoing clinical and practice experience for students in a wide variety of areas. However, in taking a closer look at the curriculum, it was indicated that of the few social work programs that offer a course related to addressing substance use disorder and/or addictions, a large majority of these courses were electives and not required as part of the curriculum. The exception to this was Morgan State University’s School of Social Work, which requires both BSW and MSW students to take a course that specifically focuses on addressing substance use and/or addiction. Despite the curriculum content not being required, some of the social work programs have engaged students in other ways- such as grant funded training programs. One such program, the Behavioral Health Workforce Education and Training Program (BHWET), was funded by the Health Resources & Services Administration (HRSA) to provide ongoing training to develop and expand the substance abuse and behavioral health workforce. This program was available to two MSW programs in the state: Morgan State University, School of Social Work and the University of Maryland, Baltimore, School of Social Work. Both of these MSW programs provided additional and enhanced training to selected MSW students who applied and were selected for the program. Another approach that has been used by some of the social work programs, was the incorporation of Screening, Brief Intervention, and Referral to Treatment (SBIRT) into their training program. The University of Maryland, Baltimore’s MSW program was awarded an SBIRT grant from SAMHSA to develop curricula and infuse it into the graduate social work program so all MSW students had the opportunity to learn an evidence-based intervention for at-risk substance use. Despite the lack of federal funding to incorporate a similar program, Morgan State University’s School of Social Work partnered with SAMHSA’s Addiction Technology Transfer Center (ATTC) to provide free and ongoing trainings to social work students, faculty, and the community at large.

Some of the suggestions to schools of social work that would enhance the focus on addressing the opioid crisis are:

- Continue to infuse addiction content into the curriculum to ensure social work students have the opportunity to address substance use disorder and/or addiction.
- Consider enhancing existing curriculum to include a required course or elective course.

Addressing the needs of the current workforce

In addition to examining the efforts that social work programs are engaging in, we examined ongoing efforts in the professional workforce which have been used to enhance professional development in the area of the opioid epidemic. One of the ways we engaged in this process was through our Meeting of the Profession: The Social Work Force in Maryland event which occurred on October 23, 2018. During this meeting, it was emphasized that social workers would like to have more training in the area of substance use and addictions. Moreover, a large majority of social workers in attendance reported that they did not have much content or exposure to assessment and treatment of substance use disorder. As a result of this feedback, I thought it would be appropriate to share some additional resources related to substance use and addiction for social workers in Maryland.

In addition to the many trainings currently provided by NASW-MD, we also wanted to highlight the Region 3 Addiction Technology Transfer Center, which continuously provides free trainings across Maryland to behavioral health professionals. Some of the trainings offered include: motivational interviewing, SBIRT, client centered treatment planning, behavioral health ethics, and psychopharmacology. For more information about the central event which occurred on October 23, 2018, please visit their website to learn how you can partner with this organization: www.attcnetwork.org/centers/central-east-attc/home

Another training partnership that is available to social workers is the Providers Clinical Support System (PCSS). Similar to the ATTC, the PCSS provides social workers and their agencies with ongoing training and technical support to assist with specifically addressing opioid use disorders. Social Workers can request additional trainings and trainees based on need and availability. More information about the PCSS can be found here: https://pcss-uw.org/

Recommendations:

It is imperative that social workers at every level continue to engage in professional development; more specifically, professional development around addressing substance use disorders.

Develop a training plan for your agency and staff and connect with available organizations to access these free and low-cost trainings.
NASW-MD Advocates for the Fight for $15 in 2019

Allison Berkowitz
MSW and doctoral candidate

One in ten Marylanders lives under the poverty line. As social workers this should weigh heavily on us. After much thought and discussion, NASW-MD has decided to advocate for a higher minimum wage during the 2019 legislative session. The minimum wage was created in the 1930s to help provide a quality standard of life, but as a country we’ve lost sight of that goal. If the minimum wage had kept up with inflation and productivity, estimates are that it would be somewhat higher than $12 an hour*. The federal minimum wage is just $7.25 an hour. While we’ve increased it to $10.10 here in Maryland, we can do better.

Currently, there are only 22 counties in the entire state within which a person working full time at minimum wage can afford to rent a one-bedroom apartment. In fact, the National Employment Law Project found individuals in Prince George’s County need at least $21 an hour right now just to afford the basics (housing, food, transportation).

We are pricing people into homelessness. This is not in accordance with our profession’s ethical principles, and we should be working to rectify the problem.

Other measures could be taken to reduce the wealth gap, but none have the momentum, energy, or positive public regard that the Fight for $15 does. In 2018, a Goucher Poll found that 71% of Marylanders favor a $15 minimum wage. While many people think low-wage workers are all teens and college kids, this is a misconception. The average worker who will benefit from the wage increase is a 36-year-old woman. Adults 20 and older make up 90% of the workers affected in Maryland, half of them with some level of post-secondary education, and 30% with families to support. We also have to consider the role of the racial income and wealth gap. Here in Maryland the average white worker earns $24 an hour while the average black Marylander earns about $19 an hour, which is 21% less. As social workers, we know these income differences have exponential consequences in matters of health, stress, and quality of life. A wage increase will not change a person’s life immediately, but it will give an annual boost of approximately $4,600 per person, which can go a long way. Statistics show that 64% of low wage earners work full time – or more than full time in the case of having two or more jobs – but still can’t make ends meet. This is unacceptable.

The Fight for $15 is understandably controversial. There is no “slam dunk” research to show that it is the best thing to do. However, there is nothing to the contrary showing it does great harm to individuals or businesses. From what I have read, the research consensus is somewhat mixed. While many workers are excited about this prospect in Maryland, there is also fear from small businesses. While I believe there could be legislative fixes to help address their concerns, there are also first-hand accounts from Maryland small business owners – already paying $15 or more an hour – who have found a host of benefits. They say happier workers mean less turnover, which reduces in-house costs. When workers can afford to do so, they choose to spend money at their place of employment. Our state has a wide coalition fighting for this endeavor and it includes small businesses. For more information, visit if15maryland.org.

Many states, cities, and counties throughout the United States have chosen to increase the minimum wage to $15 an hour, including Montgomery County, Maryland. Some locales have chosen (as Maryland legislators have proposed) to slowly increase over the course of several years to allow for a smooth transition. Something has to be done to offer a firmer economic footing to all our citizens. The struggles of everyday Marylanders need to be addressed in Annapolis and all over the state. I want the stories of our clients and the impossible choices they have to make on a regular basis to be seared into the minds of our legislators.

Marylanders deserve better. Please consider getting involved this session by calling and writing your legislators, and coming to advocate with us during lobby day, and providing written or in-person testimony when you’re able.

*The $12 – 22 an hour range, of what the minimum wage would be today if it had been updated as needed over the years, varies so widely because there are many ways to estimate. For example, if calculated based solely on inflation, you get closer to the $12 mark but including other factors like productivity and cost of living the average is closer to the $22 mark.

Introspection and Social Work Practice

Rachael Wallace, LCSW-C

Beyond the bustling days of the holiday season, the lull of hibernation inherently connected to the Winter Solstice presents a valuable opportunity for introspection. As social workers, we can appreciate the shared energies between the people and environments in which we live. The space between winter and spring is a good opportunity to allocate time to look within and discern what is that fuels our own energies and purpose.

Understanding who we are and how we chose our paths – or how our paths chose us – provides invaluable insight into appreciating how our strengths and weaknesses inform who we are as we strive to improve the world we share and serve. Further, recognizing and understanding what motivates those around us in our families, organizations, and communities offers additional insight into the collective energies of each. Arguably, it is most important to start within ourselves.

As individuals, a willingness to identify and accept our own strengths and weaknesses is the first step in our personal evolution toward an ideal self. Likewise, reciprocal sharing of our strengths offers remarkable opportunities for growth and connection. By both individually and as a unified group of similarly-minded people. After all, not everyone is cut out to be a social worker.

Collectively, we are all social workers, but what motivates each of us to pursue our individual specialties, advocacy work, or professional identity within the practice of social work may serve to either connect or separate us. Together we are stronger. Appreciating that we all share professional standards and a desire to make a favorable impact on the people and world we share creates a unique opportunity for growth and fellowship among a group of amazing people with a desire to leave the world better than we found it.
A call for racial justice and anti-racism at the UMSSW

Please Note: The following article is the opinion of the authors and does not necessarily reflect the views of the NASW-MD Chapter or Board.

We are members of the University of Maryland School of Social Work (SSW) community who are concerned about ongoing gender- and race-based discrimination at the school. We seek reform and repair of a decades-long problem within the school’s culture and curriculum, as the refusal of SSW administrators to acknowledge and remedy this discrimination undermines both the mission of the school and our professional code.

As graduates of the SSW, we value the institution and want it to be better. We want the school to center anti-racism and engage in critical self-reflection—a practice that’s integral to our work. The SSW is located in Baltimore City, with a population that is 65 percent Black. The city’s neighborhoods are divided by historical and ongoing economic and racial segregation. The school also serves a student body that is 30 percent Black, 10 percent Latinx, and 3 percent Asian and Asian-American, yet there are currently no Black or Asian tenured faculty and only one tenured Latinx professor. How did this come to be?

When we asked this and other questions to SSW faculty, staff, and alumni, many described an oppressive culture that pervades the school and its history. We learned that a Black faculty member was refused entrance to an administrative building last year because of their skin color. One of these writers was berated and threatened by an administrator for raising issues of racism on campus, part of a pattern of behavior experienced and witnessed by these authors and shared with them in confidence by others. Another student wrote to a number of high-level administrators about experiences of race-based discrimination and profiling and was offered an apology but no course of action, further inquiry, or outreach.

Like any large employer, the University of Maryland must adhere to the standards, laws, and practices included in Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and its later amendments. This law prohibits employer-based discrimination on the basis of sex, race, color, national origin, and religion. By this law, it’s also illegal for employers to retaliate against an employee who complains or files a charge of discrimination or participates in a related investigation or lawsuit. The law requires a clear procedure for reporting Title VII-related complaints (separate from Title IX); a policy compliance statement and additional training and supports for all faculty so they can grow in skill to create more inclusive class and school environments. We are also working on making additional training in implicit bias and other related matters more available to all faculty and staff.

Our Diversity and Anti-Oppression (DAO) Committee, which includes faculty, staff, students, and alumni members, also works to address areas of concern—it has been doing so for five years. We have also retained Jeffrey Ash associate dean for diversity in Maryland’s School of Nursing, to be sure we are tapping into all of UMB’s best campus training resources and ideas. We continue significant efforts to recruit and retain a diverse faculty. We believe that this year’s recruitment efforts will help lead to important additions of tenure track and tenured African American faculty. We are excited about these possibilities and attentive to the need to continue building the pipeline of underrepresented minority faculty while also supporting our faculty. Our work on diversity does not end with improvements to the MSW curriculum and hiring. We are also deeply engaged in strengthening diverse and underserved communities and addressing issues of race equity. The UMB SSW has recently been acknowledged for this work with special recognition for our Promise Heights efforts (by a $30M award from the US Department of Education) and for the extensive programming offered by our Social Work Community Outreach Service. In appreciation, the School has been acknowledged by Higher Education Excellence in Diversity (HEED) for this work. My colleagues and I welcome your help forward to continued discussion about strategies to improve the school and bolster its impact. Toward that end, we hope the op-ed authors and those who share their concerns will join us to teach courses; offer field supervision; achieve success on grants to increase the support for our research, training, and student stipends; bolster the law that saves the day; and lift up the great profession of social work.

Update on New Regulations

Daphne McClellan, PhD, MSW

As we all know, in October the BSWE promulgated proposed regulations to carry out the changes to the social work licensing act which were passed in 2017. The public comment period on the proposed regulations ended November 13th. The BSWE received a large number of comments, questions, and suggestions for revised language. The Statutes and Regulations Committee of the Board has reportedly been meeting twice monthly to carefully review and consider the comments from the public. What happens next? Will the regulations be official? The way we understand it, upon completing the review process, the board will decide whether or not to make significant changes to the proposed regulations, make small, insignificant changes, or make no changes at all. Significant changes would require another public comment period.

It is true that all of this is taking a very long time. However, we are appreciative that so many members of our profession took the time to read and comment on the proposed regulations and that the BSWE is taking the comments from the public so seriously. We are hopeful that the end result will be a product we all can appreciate—one that will protect the public while not placing an undue hardship on practitioners.

NEW REGS—Please be advised that new draft regulations were published in the Maryland Register on Friday, Jan. 18th. We are now in the 30 day public comment period on these regulations. They are not as extensive as the proposed regulations published in October. They are part of a required review of the entirety of our regulations. Please visit the Maryland Register, Jan. 18th edition online (pages 71-73) to read the proposed changes.
CALL FOR JUSTICE

NASW Maryland and the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE), the school’s accrediting body, to the problems above.

In the fall of 2017, we were part of a group of students and alumni who submitted a formal grievance to CSWE, asking for assistance in addressing discrepancies between accreditation standards and the curriculum and culture at the school. CSWE opened a long-term investigation and gathered testimony from students, alumni, faculty, and staff. Following these meetings, CSWE raised a number of issues they hope the SSW will address in the coming year, including but not limited to: the adoption of a diversity statement, the creation of more inclusive physical and social spaces, and the formation of faculty, staff, and student trainings in “diversity and anti-oppression” to improve teaching and increase self-awareness. To date, the university has adopted some of these reforms half-heartedly and has failed to implement comprehensive and effective changes.

We believe there is more work to be done to create an institution that fosters an analysis of historical and pervasive racism as the root cause for community unrest, poverty, and trauma. It is imperative that social workers trained at the SSW become adept at self-reflection and cultural humility, examining and maintaining awareness of their positions within power structures, their biases, and their actions. Additionally, evidence of our learning, competence, and practice of this process must be measured.

The majority of graduates from the SSW will work with populations overwhelmed by the effects of systems and institutions that maintain the status quo of inequality and inequity. Without critical self-awareness of our own role within these oppressive systems, we perpetuate this harm. Until the institutions that train and educate social workers apply the ethical principles and standards set forth by CSWE and NASW, the profession will fail its students, workers, and the most marginalized and disenfranchised populations they serve.

The NASW is an organization that "promote[s] social justice, promote[s] the social work profession, support[s] the professional development of social workers, and advocate[s] for professional social work standards." In this spirit, we are calling on NASW Maryland leadership to support students, faculty, and staff working for an end to racial- and gender-based discrimination at the state’s largest institution for educating social workers. We are calling on students, faculty, staff, and alumni to engage in action to dismantle the SSW’s culture of discrimination. We are calling on social workers to lead anti-racist efforts and organize in our practice, our communities, our families, and within ourselves. For members of the SSW community, we want to create a space where you can share your stories and experiences of discrimination in the hopes of working toward reform and building stronger community without the fear of retaliation. With the increased visibility of this ongoing problem, and the scrutiny of CSWE, we hope this work becomes a priority for those in the SSW community and that we can begin to collaborate on transforming the school into an anti-racist, multicultural institution.

PRESIDENT’S REPORT

Licensure and Regulations

Another review that was conducted to gain a better understanding of how social workers are addressing the opioid epidemic was to see how the Board of Social Work Examiners (BSWE) defined social work practice and specifically addressing substance use disorders. During this review, it was noted that in 2017, House Bill 1183 (Senate Bill 986) specifically clarified “that treatment of behavioral health disorders (including substance use disorders and addictive disorders) are within the scope of practice for MSW-level social workers. Even though such work has always been within our scope, this clarification is very helpful. Unfortunately, the legislation placed addiction work within the purview of specialized clinicians only; stating that "[This] treatment must be performed by an LCSW-C or someone supervised by a person with an LCSW-C license." And further stating [in a subsequent revision (2018) of HB 1183 Chapter 548, this practice definition was further clarified] that LMSW social work practice includes the "treatment of behavioral health disorder, including substance use disorder, addictive disorders, mental disorders, and the provision of psychotherapy under the supervision of a licensed certified social worker-clinical."

It is important that our practice act specifies social work’s role in addressing substance use and addictive behaviors. However, this area should not be limited to clinicians only. As with certified addiction counselors, social workers at every level are needed in this work. There are roles for LBSWs, LMSWs, and LCSWs. The needs of the workforce and the ability to address the needs of the community we serve must constantly evolve to ensure we are making the greatest impact in our mission. It is my hope that more social workers will seek out opportunities to work in the behavioral health or addiction area. This is a key opportunity for social workers to respond and lead the way on developing and implementing a majority of the interventions that are being rolled out across the state.

Recommendations to the Board of Social Work Examiners

Continue to review the current standards that are being applied with regard to addressing substance use disorders. Given that social workers are one of the largest providers of professional behavioral health services in the U.S., we are uniquely positioned to intervene on behalf of individuals and families impacted by substance use and addiction. Social workers can intervene at every stage of the treatment continuum such as prevention, early intervention, intervention, and recovery.

Moreover, social workers engage in clinical practice in a wide variety of settings including but not limited to schools, community centers, federally qualified healthcare centers, faith-based organizations, clinics, and child welfare agencies. The diversity of social work means that we can have the greatest impact when addressing substance use and addiction. In addition, our person-in-environment framework provides greater opportunities to address the complex issues often present relating to housing, healthcare, food and job insecurity, and education. It is critical that we continue to assess the current workforce needs and ensure that we are responding to the growing opioid crisis. NASW-MD will be leading the way to expand opportunities under our licensing act and regulations to make sure addiction work is within the scope of ALL social workers.
Solitary Confinement in Maryland

Rabbi Charles Feinberg, Executive Director of Interfaith Action for Human Rights

The Hebrew Bible begins by teaching that it is not good for human beings to be alone. Human beings are ultimately social creatures; needing family, friends, and community in order to thrive. Isolated from regular engagement with other human beings can cause human beings to become seriously depressed and physically ill. These values are directly related to the practice of isolating a prisoner otherwise known as solitary confinement. Solitary confinement is defined as isolating a prisoner in a 6 x 9 cell with or without another prisoner for 22 or 23 hours a day. The only time the prisoner can be let out of the cell is for showering and/or exercise. Even the exercise has to be done in an enclosed cage without anybody else present.

The United Nations Special Rapporteur on Torture has defined isolating a person for more than 15 days as an act of torture. Over the last 15 years much psychological research has been done which has shown how destructive solitary confinement can be. Craig Haney, who has conducted studies on solitary, has testified that “the kind of segregation. IAHR has plenty of anecdotal evidence that many are placed in solitary for months and years. We have also learned from the DPSCS reports that over a three-year period over 700 people were released from solitary directly to the community. Their average length of stay was 60 days. Releasing prisoners directly from solitary is a threat to public safety as well as being a threat to the well-being of the person released. Accordingly, IAHR has identified sponsors in the Maryland Legislature who will be introducing three bills that IAHR and its coalition partners have proposed (no bill numbers have been assigned yet):

Bill #1: to ban direct release from solitary to the public (with some exceptions, especially for the health of the inmate), sponsored by Senator Will Smith and Delegate Jazz Lewis.

Bill #2: to limit the number of consecutive days in a given year that an inmate may be held (15 days is the recommendation from research and Corrections guidelines), sponsored by Senator Susan Lee and Delegate Jazz Lewis.

Bill #3 (in collaboration with NARAL Pro-Choice Maryland and Reproductive Justice Inside (RJI) taking the lead) ban on involuntary medical isolation of pregnant and post-partum incarcerated women.

Remember that every human being is created in image of God which means everyone deserves our respect no matter what he or she has done.

Health Beyond Health Care: Elevating the Role of Social Work

Keynote Speaker: Darla Spence Coffey, PhD, MSW
President and Chief Executive Officer, Council on Social Work Education

Synopsis: While members of today’s health care team are taking seriously the role of social determinants of health and health outcomes, this is quintessentially social work “space,” and therefore vital for social workers to lead in efforts to understand and deliver services to address these factors. It is also an important opportunity for social work to expand our notion of health – so that all social and behavioral factors are included in our thinking and development of intervention efforts.

Learning Objectives: Participants will:
1. Gain knowledge about the role of social determinants of health in health outcomes.
2. Gain knowledge about the roles for social work in health.
3. Deepen their understanding of the policy implications for promoting health.

10:15 a.m. - 12:15 p.m
MORNING SESSIONS (CHOOSE ONE)
SOCIAL WORK WORKFORCE BREAKOUT SESSIONS

WORKSHOP 1
The Baccalaureate Social Work Workforce

Presenters: Makeba Thomas, PhD, MSW, Chairperson/Associate Professor, University of Maryland, School of Social Work
Allyson Stanton, BSW, Geriatric Care Manager
Stevanne Ellis, BSW, State Long-Term Care Ombudsman

Synopsis: While members of today’s health care team are taking seriously the role of social determinants of health and health outcomes, this is quintessentially social work “space,” and therefore vital for social workers to lead in efforts to understand and deliver services to address these factors. It is also an important opportunity for social work to expand our notion of health – so that all social and behavioral factors are included in our thinking and development of intervention efforts.

Learning Objectives: Participants will:
1. Gain knowledge about the role of social determinants of health in health outcomes.
2. Gain knowledge about the roles for social work in health.
3. Deepen their understanding of the policy implications for promoting health.

WORKSHOP 2
The Macro Social Work Workforce

Presenters: Richard Cook, MSW, LCSW - For a Change Consulting
Michael Reich, PhD, MSW
Daniel Thursz, Distinhuished Professor of Social Justice, University of Maryland, School of Social Work

Synopsis: What is Macro Social Work? Is the Macro/Clinical dichotomy real or two-sides of being a good social worker? The presenters will describe what roles in our profession can be filled by those with a BSW. Participants will have the opportunity to discuss the challenges and opportunities in the Maryland social work workforce for those with the BSW as their terminal degree.

Learning Objectives: Participants will:
1. Understand the difference between a BSW and MSW curriculum.
2. Understand the new licensing statute and regulations regarding the LBSW and the LMSW.
3. Have a broader view of the many roles that can be filled by a social worker with a BSW education.

WORKSHOP 3
Clinical Social Work: Workforce Issues

Presenters: Judith Schagrin, LCSW-C, ACSSW, Retired, Baltimore County Department of Social Services; Adjunct Professor, UMSSW
Edward Pecukonis, PhD, MSW, Associate Professor, UMSSW

Synopsis: What is Clinical Social Work? How is it different from other clinical professions and how is it different from just “social work”? How do we define what is clinical? What clinical work can be done by any social worker and what requires an advanced clinical license? Why? There is confusion in the Maryland SW Workforce about what is and is not clinical and what is and is not “clinical enough” to count for clinical experience toward the LCSW-C. The presenters will explore these issues. Participants will have the opportunity to discuss the challenges and opportunities in the Maryland workforce for those with clinical interests.

Learning Objectives: At the conclusion of this workshop participants will:
1. Understand the difference between a clinical social worker, an LPC, and a Ph.D. psychologist.
2. Understand the definition of Clinical Social Work as defined by the Council on Social Work Education and NASW.
3. Understand the new licensing statute and regulations regarding the LCSW, LCSW-C, and the LMSW Independent Practitioner.

WORKSHOP 4
Addiction and the Social Work Workforce

Presenters: Anthony Estree, PhD, LCSW-C, LCADC, ACSSW, Assistant Professor, School of Social Work, Morgan State University
Michelle Tuten, PhD, MSW, Associate Professor, UMSSW

Synopsis: Addiction and the Social Work Workforce: How do we define what is clinical? What clinical work can be done by any social worker and what requires an advanced clinical license? Why? There is confusion in the Maryland SW Workforce about what is and is not clinical and what is and is not “clinical enough” to count for clinical experience toward the LCSW-C. The presenters will explore these issues. Participants will have the opportunity to discuss the challenges and opportunities in the Maryland workforce for those with clinical interests.
WINTER EDITION | 2019

THE MARYLAND SOCIAL WORKER

SYNOPSIS: The opioid crisis and multiple other addictions in our society are fertile ground for social work skills and interventions. There are insufficient personnel to fill all the roles required to solve this epidemic of addiction. What level of education and certification is required to work in this field? LSBW, LCSW, LCSW-C, LSW, LICSW. The presenters will discuss the addiction field and the challenges and opportunities for social workers who are interested in this work.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
1. Have a basic understanding of addiction in Maryland.
2. Understand the different roles in the addiction workforce.
3. Understand the new licensing statute and regulations regarding the LSBW, LMSW, LCSW-C and the Independent Practitioner status.

WORKSHOP 7
Don’t Fall Prey To The Crime of the 21st Century

Presenter: Delia Meadows, MSW, LCSW-C, LICSW
Director, Clinical Social Work Consulting Services CORE Business Solutions LLC

Synopsis: Learn about the top ten scams that target people in the United States. These scams aim not only to target seniors, but also target the general population. Individuals who fall prey to these scams do not necessarily have cognitive disorders. Attendees will learn what information to reveal and who to contact when you have concerns about scams.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
1. The top ten scams targeting seniors and others.
2. What information never to share.
3. Identifying behaviors and cognitive impairments that may indicate a possible cognitive disorder or undiagnosed medical condition.
4. Who to contact when you have concerns.

WORKSHOP 8
What Happens on Social Media STAYS on Social Media: What Social Workers Need to Know About Ethics and Social Media

Presenter: Jeronda Burley, MDiv, Ph.D. Assistant Professor, Department of Social Work, Coppin State University

Synopsis: In this workshop we will examine the extensive scope of social media and technology in relation to social work. The relevance and application of the Standards for Technology in Social Work Practice that emerged from the burgeoning connection of social work and technology will be discussed. The presenter will highlight some of the dangers of social media and discuss cases of ethical violations committed by social workers. In addition to ethical considerations, all social workers should consider, the benefits of social media in social work will also be covered. The session will conclude with examples of how social workers can ethically utilize social media in practice. Attendees are encouraged to bring a tablet or phone and charger (or a fully charged device) to the workshop. In an effort to reduce our use of paper, course handouts and presentation materials will be emailed by the presenter after the session at participants’ request.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
After this workshop participants will be able to:
1. Review the established Standards for Technology in Social Work Practice.
2. Understand the dangers of social media.
3. Recognize ethical concerns for social workers and social media.
4. Discuss positive uses for social media in social work.

MORNING WORKSHOPS

WORKSHOP A
Ethical Considerations for Supervisors

Presenter: Corey Beauford, MSW, LCSW Supervisor and President, Inspired Consulting Group, Riverdale

Synopsis: Social work supervisors are responsible for resolving a multitude of ethical dilemmas on an almost daily basis. Furthermore, supervisors can be held liable for infractions made by their supervisees. In response to these challenges, we will review ethical standards related to: conflicts of interests, impairment, administration, confidentiality, supervision, duty to warn, and receiving gifts. This interactive training will make use of a variety of teaching methods, including case study reviews and small and large group discussions.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
By the end of this workshop, participants will be able to:
1. Understand factors that contribute to ethical violations.
2. Understand and apply NASW Code of Ethics standards that relate to supervision.
3. Employ best practices approaches to the resolution of ethical dilemmas with supervisees.
4. Please note: This workshop qualifies for EITHER the Maryland Board of Social Work Examiners’ 3-hour ethics requirement OR the 3-hour supervision requirement (for supervisors) needed for license renewal.

Please Note: This workshop qualifies for the Maryland BSWE 3-hour ethics requirement for license renewal.

WORKSHOP C
Suicide Risk: Identifying and Treating the Suicidal Client

Presenter: Carey S. Riordan, LCSW-C, MBA Behavioral Health Unit, Holy Cross Germantown Hospital

Synopsis: Suicide is a growing problem in our society. Understanding triggers and risk factors that lead to suicidal behavior is critical in order to intervene safely and appropriately with at-risk clients. Suicidal people are challenging to assess and it is important to identify signs and risk factors that lead to self-harmful and suicidal behaviors. This workshop provides tips to help determine suicidal risk, tools to accurately assess level of risk, and safe treatment interventions.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
Upon completion of this workshop attendees will learn:
1. How to identify triggers that lead to suicide and self harm.
2. To identify risk factors that lead to suicidal behavior, such as substance abuse, family conflict, homelessness, and job loss.
3. To identify levels of risk, i.e., passive versus active suicide ideation.
4. To gather collateral information and assess for safety.
5. To make referrals to appropriate psychiatric treatment provider once level of suicidal risk is determined.

WORKSHOP D
Alzheimer’s Disease and Responding to Distressed Workers and Families: A Guide to Handling Emotionally-Charged Situations

Presenter: Charlene Davis, MSW Social Work, Holy Cross Hospital
3. Understand how to frame the "new normal" for families who care for Alzheimer's patients.

Learning Objectives: Upon completion of this workshop, attendees will:
1. Learn specific skills to assist workers or resident’s families how to deal with Alzheimer’s disease and respond to its effects.
2. Gain knowledge and ability to refer people to appropriate services for Alzheimer’s disease.
3. Understand how to frame the “new normal” for families who care for patients with Alzheimer’s disease.
4. Describe ways in which the family members, colleagues, or workers can navigate their new roles.
5. Develop a clear process on how to handle challenging conversations with Alzheimer’s patients.

WORKSHOP E
Closing the Communication Gap between Individuals of Different Ages

Presenter: S. Coby Peters, Ph.D., LCSW-C
CEO, Human Systems
Synopsis: Multiple times a day we read or hear about different generations in popular media and in conversation. The subject of intergenerational conflict is common and prevalent, but social science researchers are showing that the concept of distinct “generations” with certain characteristics is a myth that may actually be contributing to workplace conflict. In this workshop, participants will learn about the latest research on the concept of “generations” and why people in different age groups may have different perspectives. We will also learn about how the popular media portrays different age groups and how those portrayals change over time. Finally, participants will learn techniques to resolve conflict in the workplace, including conflict between individual and groups of different ages.

Learning Objectives: Upon completion of workshop, attendees will:
1. Learn about current research on generations and generational differences.
2. Understand how the popular media promotes generational stereotypes, thereby contributing to conflict in the workplace.
3. Learn techniques to resolve conflict in the workplace, including conflict between individual and groups of different ages.

WORKSHOP F
Ethical Considerations when Working with Immigrants

Presenter: Laura Gardner, LCSW-C
Founder/Consultant, Gardner and Associates
Imigrants, Refugees, and Schools
Synopsis: Reflect on common ethical dilemmas in working with immigrant clients through case examples and small group work. Learn how to appropriately use the Code of Ethics as a guide in decision making. Come and participate in this practical, hands-on ethics training!

Learning Objectives: Upon completion of this workshop, attendees will:
1. Learn about common ethical dilemmas in working with immigrant clients.
2. Appropriately use the Code of Ethics as a guide in decision-making.
3. Gain awareness of how to handle tricky ethical situations when working with immigrant clients.

Please note: This workshop meets the three-hour ethics requirement of the Maryland Board of Social Work Examiners for license renewal.

WORKSHOP G
Ethical Considerations when Working with Immigrants

Presenter: Carla Dunahoo, Ph.D.
Licensed Clinical Psychologist, Dunahoo Psychological Associates, LLC
Synopsis: “Transgender” is a term heard more frequently now than it was in the past. In addition to transgender issues being discussed more in the media, it is much more likely that we will come into contact with people who identify as transgender as more people are open about their gender identity than at any time in the past. This program will discuss what the term “transgender” means, present information about the transgender population, and provide guidance for how to approach and work clinically with people who identify as transgender in a supportive, affirmative and effective manner.

Learning Objectives: Upon completion of this workshop, attendees will:
1. Have more knowledge of gender diversity and what the terms transgender and gender variant mean.
2. Have a greater understanding of the challenges faced by gender variant people in society.
3. Have more awareness of the challenges faced by transgender/ gender variant people in healthcare.
4. Know how to approach people who identify as transgender in more culturally sensitive ways.

2:00 p.m. – 5:00 p.m.
AFTERNOON WORKSHOPS

WORKSHOP J
Social Workers Respond: Integrating SBIRT into Social Work Practice

Presenter: Anthony Estreet, Ph.D., LCSW-C, LCADC, ACSW
Assistant Professor, School of Social Work, Morgan State University
Synopsis: Research has demonstrated that the SBIRT (Screening, Brief Intervention and Referral to Treatment) model is beneficial in assisting healthcare practitioners to identify and assist clients with making connections to Substance Use Disorder (SUD) treatment. This model has shown significant effectiveness in hospital emergency departments and trauma centers with individuals with alcohol-related injuries. The purpose of this training is to provide social work practitioners with the knowledge and skills necessary to effectively utilize and implement the SBIRT model into standard social work practice.

Learning Objectives: Upon completion of this workshop, participants will be able to:
1. Describe the background and rationale for conducting SBIRT in a variety of social work settings.
2. Explain how to utilize universal screening procedures and instruments to identify patients engaged at-risk substance using behaviors.
3. Identify and discuss the essential elements of a brief intervention strategy to motivate patients to change their at-risk behavior and/or seek treatment.
4. Understand the critical steps of implementing evidence-based SBIRT practices.

WORKSHOP K
Foundational Values of Ethical Practice: It Ain’t Easy Being Clean

Presenter: Frances Williams-Crawford, LCSW-C
Training Specialist, Child Welfare Academy, University of Maryland-Baltimore
Synopsis: The NASW Code of Ethics is founded on six core values and principles. Practitioners should have more than a “working understanding” of what the obligations are. It is difficult to meet the lofty goals while doing very challenging work with difficult clients. Concrete examples of how workers can uphold each of these values will be provided as well as other behaviorally specific means discussed.

Learning Objectives: After successful completion of this course, participants will be able to:
1. List the values and principles of the NASW Code of Ethics.
2. Identify personal and professional behaviors to adhere to the Code.
3. Provide concrete examples of how social workers can demonstrate these values and principles in everyday practice.

Please note: This workshop meets the three-hour ethics requirement of the Maryland Board of Social Work Examiners for license renewal.

WORKSHOP L
Trauma Treatment with Children and Adolescents

Presenter: Mimi Rivas, LCSW-C, RFT-S
Owner, Lighthouse Center for Therapy & Play, LLC
Synopsis: Some of the most rewarding work a therapist can do is to help a child recover from a traumatic event. In this 3 hour workshop participants will learn about mindfulness and other intervention techniques, how trauma presents in children, and effective strategies to use in school, private practice, and other settings. The presenter will discuss the most common diagnoses in children and they are presented through trauma as well as the effects of trauma on the brain in children and adolescents.

Learning Objectives: Upon completion of this workshop, attendees will:
1. Identify at least one intervention to use when working with traumatized children.
2. Have a better understanding of trauma, various types of traumatic stress, and how it impacts children’s lives.
3. Use various clinical strategies to allow children and adolescents to tell their stories.
4. Define grief & mourning and understand children’s reactions to each.

Children, Families, and Trauma: A Relational Approach

Presenter: Kenneth V. Hardy, Ph.D.
Professor, Drexel University; Director, Eikenberg Institute for Relationships, New York City.
Synopsis: Trauma, all too often, is a predictable event that underpins the everyday life experiences of most children and families involved in therapy. In fact, possessing a good working knowledge of the nuances of trauma is essential to providing intensive therapy with children and families whether trauma is indicated as a part of the presenting concern or not. Unfortunately, most approaches to trauma today—including EMDR, somatic therapies, hypnosis, and most psychodynamic treatments—take the individual as their exclusive focus. However, ignoring the impact of the trauma on the client’s family overlooks powerful dynamics that are crucial to treatment outcome. Participants in this workshop will learn how to involve the trauma sufferer’s partner and other family members as resources in the healing process. Participants will learn how to better educate clients about the typical symptoms of trauma, the stages of trauma recovery, how to help family members both soothe and set limits with the traumatized person, and the typical pitfalls families encounter—including the deleterious response of “enough already”—as a family member tries to heal from a trauma. Special attention will be devoted to examining the critical intersection that often exists between trauma and the dynamics of socio-cultural oppression.

Learning Objectives: will be to provide participants with:
1. A conceptual framework for providing a Relational Approach to trauma based work with children and families;
2. Strategies and techniques for assessing and treating trauma that is embedded within intimate relationships;
3. A thorough examination and critique of the hidden wounds of trauma and oppression;
4. Strategies and techniques for treating the hidden wounds of trauma and oppression; and
5. An examination of relevant self of the therapist issues that may facilitate or impede clinical effectiveness.

Cultural Competence in Social Work Practice: A Multicultural Perspective

Presenter: Kenneth V. Hardy, Ph.D.
Professor, Drexel University; Director, Eikenberg Institute for Relationships, New York City.
Synopsis: As society becomes increasingly more diverse, the one size fits all approach to therapy and other human services has outlived its utility. As services are extended across racial, ethnic, and religious boundaries, it has become imperative for providers to develop a strong sense of cultural competence. Service delivery in today’s world requires practitioners to not only master the rudiments of their craft, but also to work sensitively and effectively with a wide array of clients from vastly diverse backgrounds, including the racially oppressed, ethnic minorities, women, gay-lesbians-bisexuals, and immigrant populations. It is virtually impossible to work effectively in today’s world without establishing and integrating cultural competence within all aspects of standard practice. This workshop will be devoted to assisting participants develop and enhance cultural competence in clinical practice and other service delivery systems. Participants will receive comprehensive strategies and techniques for effectively addressing the nuances and the complexities of cultural diversity in clinical practice. A portion of the workshop will be devoted to the exploration of culturally-based self of the provider issues that may facilitate and/or impede the development of cultural competence.

Learning Objectives: Specific attention will be devoted to the following culturally competent clinical tasks:
1. How to ask systemically-based questions that are informed by culture.
2. How to recognize and effectively address culturally-based micro-aggressions;
3. How to effectively introduce and integrate “context talk” (i.e., gender, race, class, sexual orientation, etc.) into the therapeutic conversation; and
4. How to effectively differentiate culturally sanctioned behavior from dysfunctional behavior.

Ethical Considerations When Conducting Both Individual and Group Supervision

Presenter: Joanna Frankel, LCSW-C Owner, Frankel Care Consulting
About Joanna Frankel: Joanna is a graduate of Towson University with Bachelors in both Psychology and Gerontology. She obtained her MSW from the University of Maryland, School of Social Work with a clinical concentration and a focus in Aging. She has been working in the long-term care setting for over 15 years as a director and a consultant and has experience in mental health, end of life care, dialysis and ventilator dependent clients, dementia, and advance directives. Additionally, Joanna is passionate about supervising social work licensure candidates. She is an adjunct professor in the Gerontology program at Howard County Community College, teaching both Aging and Mental Health and Social Gerontology. Further, Joanna is an instructor at the Johns Hopkins University Odyssey Program, teaching Ethical Issues for Elder Caregivers. Joanna is the Owner of Frankel Care Consulting and her focus is to guide and educate professionals, individuals, and families through senior life transitions.

Synopsis: Conducting supervision can be a challenging yet rewarding experience whether working individually or in a group setting. This interactive course will focus on the social work code of ethics workers are mandated to follow along with the dilemmas that can arise during supervision. Each participant will be encouraged to share their experiences and together, identify any potential dilemmas.

Learning Objectives: Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:
1. Understand the benefits of group supervision as a complement to individual supervision while recognizing the different ethical dilemmas that can occur.
2. Structure supervision sessions to facilitate discussions that are focused on practice themes, cases, and how the social work code of ethics apply.
3. Identify ethical dilemmas that can arise during supervision.

PLEASE NOTE: This workshop qualifies for EITHER the Maryland Board of Social Work Examiners’ 3-hour ethics requirement OR the 3-hour supervision requirement (for supervisors) needed for license renewal.

Interview with Advance Placement Social Work Intern Ashley Shindler

When did you decide to work with older adults?

I always knew I wanted to work in geriatrics. Before starting my work on my MSW I had worked with people with dementia for four years. I chose to work with older adults this year in my advanced placement.

Describe your work in your placement.

My field placement at SAFE: Stop Abuse of Elders was definitely unique. At SAFE, much of our work with clients was over the phone rather than in person. In addition to the individual work with clients, I co-facilitated a mutual aid group for trauma survivors. I was also involved with work on a large grant from the Office of Violence Against Women. The first stage of that grant was a needs assessment to identify what kind of help was needed to address elder abuse in Baltimore City. We surveyed members of city senior centers. In addition, I was involved in education and outreach. We spoke to seniors about scams and financial exploitation, legal rights, privacy, and autonomy.

What was your initial reaction to your placement?

When I was first interviewed for the placement, I was excited and wanted to get into it. It felt like a good fit, because it had elements of community, individual clients, and a topic (abuse) that is not often dealt with—especially in regard to older adults. It was my first time working with trauma and abuse, so I didn’t know what to expect. I had to do a lot of self-reflection, and pay attention to transference and countertransference. The issue is so personal, and every experience is unique. I learned to understand what the client wanted, even if it wasn’t what I would have wanted in their situation. I am glad to have had that experience.

Once you began the work, what were some of the most valuable things you learned?

I learned so much about ethics and, in particular, cultural competency. Jacke had me print the NASW Code of Ethics and put it up on the wall, so I would read it.

SAFE: Stop Abuse of Elders

An Interview with Field Instructor Jacke Schroeder, LCSW-C; director of SAFE (Stop Abuse of Elders)

Jacke Schroeder served as the Field Instructor during the 2017-18 school year for Ashley Shindler, Advanced Practice MSW student at UMSSW. We spoke with them about their experience in the gerontological field placement at SAFE.

Q: What is the work of the agency?

SAFE: Stop Abuse of Elders helps older adults who have experienced abuse—physical, emotional, sexual, or financial; or have been neglected by a caregiver—by providing crisis counseling, safety planning, civil legal services (through our partnership with Maryland Legal Aid), temporary voluntary shelter, and linkage to therapy and other services. We also educate professionals and older adults about elder abuse, and work with our partners to create a collaborative community response to elder abuse. SAFE: Stop Abuse of Elders is a program of CHANA, the Jewish response to abuse and trauma.

Q: What part did the student play in that work?

Ashley was enthusiastic to learn about all aspects of the work. She pitched in with her ideas and great creativity. She did casework, gave presentations in senior centers, and wrote a paper for the executive director about multidisciplinary teams. She helped coordinate the sheltering of an abused client. We invited Ashley to be part of bigger systems, such as NASW-MD’s Committee on Aging (which was rewarding for her) and would not have happened without the placement.

Q: What inspired you to become a field instructor?

The field of aging needs more social workers. With the rapid increase in the older adult population, it is our professional responsibility to give students the experience, skills, and the inspiration to work with older adults.

Q: What did you learn in the process?

I learned how to balance her needs and the organization’s needs, and to tailor the internship to meet her learning style. Being a field instructor is a real time commitment, but it was very rewarding to see Ashley’s growth during the year.

Q: What did your agency gain from having a field student?

We gained a fresh perspective and new energy. Ashley’s creativity allowed us to introduce new elements into our presentations to older adults. Also, we learned a lot about what the UM School of Social Work is doing, and how that relates to work in our field.

Q: What were some of the challenges?

I felt responsible that Ashley received rich learning opportunities—much more than just coming to our office and observing every day. I was always looking for new experiences to expose her to. We really focused on making her a part of the team. It was a good challenge!

Q: What advice would you give a social worker in aging who is considering offering a placement?

As social workers serving elders, we have a professional obligation to help student social workers see the benefits of working with older people—to inspire students to fully see elders as people. We can give students an opportunity to see how older adults are assets to our communities, and how they can enrich all of our lives.

How you can become a Field Instructor

While guidelines vary slightly among social work programs, field instructors are generally required to have three years’ experience after earning an MSW from a CSWE-accredited program and must maintain appropriate social work licensure. Some programs have specific requirements for the amount of time a field instructor must be onsite, as well as guidelines for the roles and responsibilities of field instructors. All require regular supervision meetings between students and instructors and timely completion of assignments. Some require periodic meetings with field liaisons.

Many of the schools of social work offer significant support and resources for field instructors including free CEU workshops, access to online journals, support from field liaisons, and networking with other field instructors.

Call to Action:
Opportunities Needed for Students to Work with Older Adults: An Update

According to the U.S Census Bureau’s 2017 National Population Projections, by 2030, one in every five Americans will be retirement age. By that time, older adults will outnumber children in our country.*

While the demand for social work expertise in geriatrics is soaring, very few social work students in Maryland choose to take courses in aging or to seek professional experiences in older adult settings. Over the past several years, the NASW-MD Committee on Aging has worked throughout the state to educate social work students and schools about the vital importance of building a workforce to meet the needs of the burgeoning older adult population.

The committee’s efforts have included:
• Making presentations about careers in aging to social work students at all academic levels
• Serving on steering committees at schools of social work to promote a focus on aging
• Linking experienced professionals with students and new graduates for networking and job opportunities

Because social work students often get their first exposure to older adult settings in their foundation placements, the committee has issued a Call to Action to Maryland Social Workers to increase the availability of placements in those settings. More field instructors are needed to guide and mentor the next generation of professionals in aging.

Serving as a field instructor can be a rewarding and enriching experience, and the committee hopes that social workers who have not previously served in this role will consider it. More information about becoming a field instructor is available on page 14.

MARYLAND CHAPTER, NASW
Call for Nominations

It’s time once again to nominate new people to the Chapter board of directors and the Chapter Committee on Nominations and Leadership Identification.

Please go to our website (www.nasw-md.org), look to the right under masthead and click on “Leadership Opportunities” for more information and nomination forms. If you have any questions please call Daphne at (410) 788-1066 ext. 16.

The deadline to nominate yourself or someone else (get the nominee’s permission), is March 1, 2019.

The following positions are open:

Board of Directors
President-Elect
Vice President
Branch Representative (1), Eastern Shore
Branch Representative (1), Southern Maryland
Branch Representative (1), Suburban Maryland
Branch Representative (1), Metro Baltimore
MSW Student Representative (1)
BSW Student Representative (1)

All positions are for two years: July 1, 2019-June 30, 2021, except for the student representatives to the board which are for one year: July 1, 2019 - June 30, 2020.

CNLI: Committee on Nominations and Leadership Identification

We need five new members of this committee—one from each branch. This committee will meet as needed to nominate people for office and to select the Awardees for the Annual Conference.

PACE

Finally, we are looking for members of PACE (Political Action for Candidate Election) from each of our five branches.

To complete a nominations form go to www.nasw-md.org, click on “About Us” in the masthead and then click on “Leadership Opportunities”
Renewal of a social worker’s license is contingent on completion and receipt by the Board of Social Work Examiners of an application attesting to completion, within the previous 2-year period, of 40 credit hours of continuing education in programs and categories approved by the Board. At least 20 of those hours must be Category I, with at least three credit hours in ethics and professional conduct.

NASW-MD welcomes your suggestions for future workshops and locations.

Synopsis:
J.L. Moreno, the originator of psychodrama, once said: “The body remembers what the mind forgets.” This workshop demonstrates the power of psychodramatic role-play and other experiential methods to tap into the body’s wisdom as a resource for trauma recovery. By carefully bypassing common defenses and promoting healthy mind-body integration, psychodrama can address trauma symptoms safely and effectively. Key concepts underlying experiential and body-based approaches are explained, and applications to individual and group settings are provided. The workshop is highly interactive and experiential, involving the use of psychodramatic role-play. Participants leave with ideas and techniques they can immediately apply in their work settings.

Learning Objectives: After this workshop participants will be able to:
1. Explain how trauma affects the body, brain, and nervous system.
2. Describe how recovery from trauma can be promoted through holistic approaches that address body, mind, emotions, and spirit.
3. List the 5 basic animal responses that can be activated in trauma responses.
4. Describe and implement 3 experiential, body-based interventions that can be helpful in teaching clients self-soothing.
5. Define 3 psychodramatic techniques that promote body-mind integration.

Location: NASW-MD Chapter Office
5750 Executive Drive Suite 100
Baltimore, MD 21228

Presenter: Richard Cook, MSW, LCSW-C

Synopsis: Power is ever present in Macro practice. Whether discussing power dynamics in a group, organization, network of organizations, neighborhood, community, unit of government, or in society, this workshop will help participants understand universal power dynamics. How do people with power tend to see the world and tend to behave? How do people with little power tend to see the world and tend to behave? How do they interact? What are some of the hidden sources of power? How can the dynamics of power be used to bring about changes in power distribution?

Learning Objectives:
1. Understand some universal power dynamics.
2. Be able to identify a number of sources of power.
3. Gain an understanding of the impact of power dynamics on communications and perceptions, especially among groups differing degrees of power.
4. Leave with an understanding of the actions that will be required of them if they intend to engage in change oriented work among those with little power and those with a lot.
5. Connect ideas about power to concepts of leadership.

Location: NASW-MD Chapter Office
5750 Executive Drive Suite 100
Baltimore, MD 21228

Facilitator: Veronica Cruz, LCSW-C
CEO, Cruz and Associates, LLC

Synopsis: This movie is based on a true story and tells the story of Antwone Fisher. As a child his father was murdered and his mother was arrested shortly afterward, and she gave birth to him while in prison. He was quickly placed in orphanage and eventually resides with the Fisher family. By all appearances they seem like his saving grace. However, within this fragmented family he was subjected to every form of abuse including physical, psychological, and sexual. The years of abuse created a violent temper in a young man, and he joined the Navy to avoid his past. This movie explores the role of trauma (in particular the sexual abuse of males) grief/loss, nervous attempts to deal with their daughter's interracial relationship, but as the weekend progresses, a series of increasingly disturbing discoveries lead him to a truth that he could have never imagined.

Discussion Objectives: Upon completion of this workshop, participants will engage in a social work discussion about the trauma related to physical, psychological, and sexual abuse.

Private Practice Certificate Program (Parts 1 & 2 of 6)

Date: Friday, May 10, 2019; 9:30 a.m.–4:45 p.m.
Please Note: Lunch on your own from 12:45 p.m.–1:30 p.m.
Location: NASW-MD Chapter Office
5750 Executive Drive Suite 100
Baltimore, MD 21228

Presenter: Dionne Brown Bushrod, LCSW-C
Owner, Prosperity Redefined, LLC

Synopsis: You have created a perfect treatment environment, quality lighting, comfortable seating, clean and orderly space. In walks your client who is on the mobile phone, despite multiple encouragements to avoid cell phone use while in session. The client looks at the phone every time it dings, shows you the phone to show you photos of where they've been or read back text messages to emphasize their conversation points. The use of technology is reliable because clinicians are using technology to manage their businesses and stay digitally present in their personal lives. We can’t escape technology. This workshop will address the clinical usefulness of technology while addressing the need for boundaries while using technology. The workshop will address developing digital practice policies and business protocol for using technology in private practice.

Learning Objectives:
1. Develop policies on the use of technology for client communication, business management, safety methods, clinical interventions, and practitioner’s digital availability.
2. Become familiar with NASW Technology Standards and the use of Teletherapy in private practice.
3. Gather resources on effectively using technology as a treatment method.

CE: 6 Category I (3 hours qualify for 3 Ethics CEUs)

First Sunday Matinee Featuring the Film: Get Out!

Date: Sunday, June 2, 2019; 1:00 p.m.–4:15 p.m.
Location: NASW-MD Chapter Office
5750 Executive Drive Suite 100
Baltimore, MD 21228

Facilitator: Jeronda Burley, MDIV, Ph.D
Assistant Professor, Department of Social Work, Coppin State University

Synopsis: A young African-American visits his white girlfriend’s parents for the weekend, where his simmering uneasiness about their reception of him eventually reaches a boiling point. Now that Chris and his girlfriend, Rose, have reached the meet-the-parents milestone of dating, she invites him for a weekend getaway upstate with Missy and Dean. At first, Chris reads the family’s overly accommodating behavior as nervous attempts to deal with their daughter’s interracial relationship, but as the weekend progresses, a series of increasingly disturbing discoveries lead him to a truth that he could have never imagined.

Discussion Objectives: Upon completion of this workshop, participants will engage in a social work discussion about racial violence, sexual objectification, and resistance.

PART III - If I Build it, Will They Come? Marketing and Financing Your Private Practice

Synopsis: This highly focused one day workshop will concentrate on business skills and preparation necessary to plan a solid business (LSW, LCSW, LCSW-C) of the ASWB social work licensing exam. Participants will practice test questions individually and in small groups in the following areas of social work practice: Ethics, Research, Diagnosis and Assessments, Diversity, Clinical Practice, Communication, Supervision, Human Behavior in the Social Environment, and Social Policy.

Learning Objectives:
1. Help identify ASWB testing strengths and weaknesses.
2. Help prioritize study time.
3. Learn best practices for passing the social work licensing exam.
4. Learn effective ways to reduce test anxiety.

Private Practice Certificate Program (Parts 3 & 4 of 6)

Date: Friday, June 21, 2019; 9:30 a.m.–4:45 p.m.

Please Note: Lunch on your own from 12:45 p.m.–1:30 p.m.
Location: NASW-MD Chapter Office
5750 Executive Drive Suite 100
Baltimore, MD 21228

Presenter: Dionne Brown Bushrod, LCSW-C
Owner, Prosperity Redefined, LLC

Synopsis: This six-part series will take your private practice from contemplation to implementation to innovation. This series is designed to be INTERACTIVE. Time will be given to introducing resources for private practice development and the series facilitator will take time to explain action steps. The series will utilize instruction and facilitated discussion. The aim of this series is to provide real tools to get started in various points of building a business. CEU Certificates will be given to registrants who complete each class included in the series. This program is divided into three six-hour events. Attendees may register for one, two, or all three days.

PART IV - Ready, Player 1? The Use of Technology in Private Practice

Synopsis: You have created a perfect treatment environment, quality lighting, comfortable seating, clean and orderly space. In walks your client who is on the mobile phone, despite multiple encouragements to avoid cell phone use while in session. The client looks at the phone every time it dings, shows you the phone to show you photos of where they’ve been or read back text messages to emphasize their conversation points. The use of technology is reliable because clinicians are using technology to manage their businesses and stay digitally present in their personal lives. We can’t escape technology. This workshop will address the clinical usefulness of technology while addressing the need for boundaries while using technology. The workshop will address developing digital practice policies and business protocol for using technology in private practice.

Learning Objectives:
1. Develop policies on the use of technology for client communication, business management, safety methods, clinical interventions, and practitioner’s digital availability.
2. Become familiar with NASW Technology Standards and the use of Teletherapy in private practice.
3. Gather resources on effectively using technology as a treatment method.

CE: 6 Category I (3 hours qualify for 3 Ethics CEUs)
Cost: $90 for members; $130 for non-members

Reminder: 3 of the 6 hours of this workshop qualifies for the Maryland Board of Social Work Examiners’ 3-hour ethics requirement for license renewal.

Continuing Education...
NASW-MD proudly announces its inaugural Supervisory Leaders in Social Work (SLSW) certification course. Based upon the innovative Supervisory Leaders in Aging program previously offered by the Chapter and the Hartford Foundation, this program will bring social work leaders from across fields to strengthen the skills of those supervising direct service staff.

Launching during our Social Work Month Conference, this intensive course will teach best practices to use in a variety of settings to a cohort of Maryland social workers. This model offers a great opportunity for professional development while creating a network of similarly interested social workers for support and information.

The full certification will span five days, scheduled bi-weekly over nine weeks (March 29, April 11, April 25, May 9 and May 23), plus a 3-hour elective taken at the convenience of the student.

The required components will include:

- Advancing Skills in Individual Supervision
- Advancing Skills in Group Supervision
- Teaching Social Work Assessment Skills
- Measuring Outcomes of Social Work Practice
- Teaching and Incorporating Cultural Competence in Social Work Practice
- Maryland Law for Social Work Supervisors
- Ethical Considerations for Social Workers
- Evaluating Research Evidence in Social Work Practice
- Strengthening Leadership in Interdisciplinary Practice

Eligibility

Applicants must be MSWs working either as supervisors or as managers providing supervision to staff members who provide direct services to individuals or families. Both experienced and novice supervisors are encouraged to apply for this advanced training. NASW membership is not required to participate in SLSW.

Registration

The registration fee for members of NASW is $450 and $675 for non-members. NASW welcomes new members at the point of submitting an application. Apply before February 28 at: www surveymonkey.com/r/NASWMdSLSW

For more information, contact Daphne McClellan at 410-788-1066 ext. 16 or dmcclellan.naswwmd@socialworkers.org.

PART V - There is No "I" in Team: Addressing Isolation in Private Practice through an Ethical Lens

Learning Objectives:

1. Be able to resolve workplace ethical dilemmas related to the use of the internet.
2. Be able to draft social media and internet policies that align with the NASW Code of Ethics.
3. Understand portions of the new NASW Code of Ethics that relate to the ethical use of the internet and various forms of technology.
4. Effectively apply an ethical decision making model to concepts of dual relationships and boundary issues.
5. Explore the connection between self-care and secondary PTSD and burnout.
6. Be alert to the key elements of balancing ethical responsibilities in relationship to the concepts of dual relationships and boundary issues.

PART VI- Seminar: Ideas and Innovation

Synopsis: In a Ted Talk-style format, this seminar will showcase each participant’s ideas for private practice development. Participants will present their unique ideas for practice that are innovative and impactful. The workshop facilitator will take time to explain action steps. The series will utilize technology, in an interactive and supportive environment, the facilitator and workshop participants will give feedback to each other’s business ideas to discuss potential liability issues. Additionally, the workshop will address ethical dilemmas in potential dual relationships, examine common potential ethical violations in private practice and how to develop required business associate agreements with individual business collaborators.

Learning Objectives:

1. Learn how to ethnically shop for business vendors and consultants.
2. Discuss ethical considerations for individual businesses.
3. Be open to receive and to give feedback on other presentations.

Please Note: This workshop qualifies for the Maryland Board of Social Work Examiners' 3-hour ethics requirement for license renewal.

#2429 Social Work Ethics and the Internet

Date: Friday, June 21, 2019; 9:45 a.m.–1:00 p.m.

Location: NASW-MD Chapter Office
5750 Executive Drive Suite 100
Baltimore, MD 21228

Presenter: Corey Beauford, MSW, LCSW
Founder and President, Inspired Consulting Group, Riverdale

Synopsis: Section 1.08 of the NEW NASW Code of Ethics states: Social workers should be aware that posting personal information on professional websites or other media might cause boundary confusion, inappropriate dual relationships, or harm to clients. Social workers should be aware that personal affiliations may increase the likelihood that clients may discover the social worker’s presence on Web sites, social media, and other forms of technology. Social workers should be aware that involvement in electronic communication with groups based on race, ethnicity, language, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, mental or physical ability, religion, immigration status, and other personal affiliations may affect their ability to work effectively with particular clients.

This interactive training will examine considerations that social workers should take into account when deciding to join online groups, post videos to social media sites, and post comments to online articles. Lastly, the training will make use case study reviews and small group discussions.

Through a new collaboration with the University of Maryland School of Social Work, the NASW-MD Committee on Aging invites you to join our initiative to build the next generation of social workers in aging by:

- Becoming a foundation field instructor
- Mentoring a new field instructor
- Making a presentation about your professional work to a class of MSW students

If you are interested in these initiatives, please contact Bob Connolly at rcp2536@gmail.com or Barbara Korenblit at bkorenblit2@gmail.com.

If you would like to reach out to another social work program to offer support for education in aging, please contact their field placement office or aging specialization faculty. Let us know your interests and we can provide presentation materials.

The Committee on Aging welcomes new members. Monthly meetings are at the NASW-MD Chapter Office on Tuesdays at 5 pm. Contact Bob or Barbara for the meeting schedule and then participate in person or by phone.

every morning. This cue was an immense help to understand how to competently meet clients’ needs. With my social worker colleague, I put together a Jeopardy game to help seniors learn about their rights, including self-determination. Not only did I learn from my supervisor, but also from the weekly case conferences with CHANA staff.

Any “aha” moments?

My “aha” moment came when we received a call from an Adult Day center about a client who told the staff there that she was being neglected and abused at home and refused to return there. We met the client in the Emergency Room, and she then agreed to move to our elder abuse safe shelter in a long-term care facility. This was my first client. I advocated for her to make her own decisions, despite the fact that the staff at the facility noted that she had some confusion and wanted to consider guardianship. Our number one priority was the client’s safety, and we also supported her autonomy. Ultimately, the client was able to make her own decisions while in shelter.

My advice to other social work students considering work with older adults is…go for it! I found it so rewarding. Some people have preconceived notions about older adults – that they are all frail, and that working with this population is only about nursing homes, death, and dying. There are so many older clients who have so much to share! I find that being in school is a great time to have this experience.

Do you plan to work with older adults again?

I look forward to graduating in May 2019. I want to stay in the aging field; I might try to work again with people with Alzheimer’s disease and other dementias. I enjoyed working with the Jewish community, and might do that again. I can’t wait to launch my career as a social worker in aging!
