What do Social Workers do?

Social work is set apart from other helping professions by its “person-in-environment” orientation. Social workers work to address all manner of injustice caused by systemic inequalities and imbalances. Whether that be as a Licensed Clinical Social Worker (LCSW) providing therapy to help a client overcome life challenges, or advocating for client populations and addressing social justice issues at a macro level.

Some social workers help clients who face a disability or a life-threatening disease or a social problem, such as inadequate housing, unemployment, or substance abuse. Social workers also assist families that have serious domestic conflicts, sometimes involving child or spousal abuse.

Some social workers conduct research, advocate for improved services, engage in systems design or are involved in planning or policy development. Many social workers specialize in serving a particular population or working in a specific setting.

Social Work Core Values

Service: Social work’s primary goal is to help people in need and to address social problems.

Social Justice: Social workers pursue social change, particularly with and on behalf of vulnerable and oppressed people.

Dignity & Worth of the Person: Social workers respect the inherent dignity and worth of the person.

Importance of Human Relationships: Social workers recognize the central importance of human relationships.

Integrity: Social workers act honestly and responsibly and promote ethical practices in the organizations where they are employed.

Competence: Social workers practice within their areas of competence and develop and enhance their professional expertise.
