NASW-NYC has been advocating that social workers are placed in each school. A recent audit shows that many schools do not meet the 1 social worker for every 250-students ratio that is recommended by NASW and others. This audit highlights why NASW-NYC continues to push for social workers to address the biopsychosocial needs of our most precious resources -- children.

Please see link below for more information:
Audit finds lack of social workers in New York schools (spectrumlocalnews.com)