

Happy Social Work Month

Social workers help people overcome life's most difficult challenges and the troubles of everyday living.

We ensure people get the help they need from the best resources available.

Whenever and wherever you need help social workers are there.

Educated

All social workers have, at the very least, a bachelor's degree in social work. Most have a master's and many have a doctorate. Professionals must be licensed by the state to use the title of social worker.

Experienced

Social workers take pride in being the only professionals trained to navigate the interaction between human development & behavior and social, economic and cultural institutions.

Diverse

There are more than 100 social work practice areas. Social workers' help reaches every part of the community, from health care, to child welfare, to aging, to community practice, to policy work, and more.
