

The Race Relations Station

Three people of different ages, races and religions, spent 18 months "walking" together sharing stories, healing wounds and building bridges. The experience was so powerful, they've invited others to participate in the experience.

We envision a world where the violent fragmentation of our ancestral story has been healed and reunified.

The Race Relations Station is designed to re-pair the wounds of history by creating opportunities for authentic connection through story. Through a simple, yet powerful process, diverse groups are invited to journey toward wholeness both individually and as a triad.
