Section XII

Definitions of Terms Applied to Veterinary Technician Specialization

- A. Academy—An exclusive body of credentialed veterinary technicians and/or nurses with the objective of promoting scholarship and service. Membership is based on scientific or scholastic achievement and exercise of professional skills. An academy is not a recognized veterinary specialty organization.
- B. Association—An organization of veterinary professionals with the objective of advancing mutual professional interest(s).
- C. Board—A small group of members designated by a recognized veterinary technician specialty organization (VTSO) to conduct the examination of candidates, or an organization of technician specialists having the objective of examining candidates for certification. This Board is not the Executive Board that has the governing authority in a corporation.
- D. Certificate—Various organizations issue documents (certificates) attesting to attendance or participation in an educational program or series of programs. Some certificates are awarded after an individual demonstrates accomplishment of intended learning outcomes of a specific topic or skill by passing an examination based upon the information provided by the organization. The issuance of these certificates should not be confused with the certification process (i.e., certificate holders are not ‘certified in’ the field) and is not comparable to the recognition of specialists in veterinary medicine.
- E. Certification—The process of determining whether a veterinary technician has successfully completed a training program and examination process designed to assess the knowledge and skills required for providing high quality professional services and patient care in a specialty.
- F. Examination eligibility—A veterinary technician is examination-eligible when he/she has successfully completed the established requirements of a recognized veterinary technician specialty organization (VTSO) and has been accepted to take its next certifying examination. Individuals must not use the term VTS-eligible as a descriptor in promotional materials directed toward other members of the profession or the public.
