College Affordability in ALASKA

Public higher education is becoming less affordable. NCAN’s research shows that, between 2014-15 to 2018-19, there was a great decline in the percentage of affordable two- and four-year public institutions for the average Pell Grant recipient. Students’ financial aid, family contributions, and work earnings failed to cover the full cost of attendance. The remaining value is defined as an “affordability gap.”

This is the state of college affordability for Pell Grant recipients in Alaska.

PERCENTAGE OF INSTITUTIONS THAT ARE AFFORDABLE, 2018-19

- Alaska: 50%
- U.S.: 23%

AFFORDABILITY GAPS, 2018-19

- Alaska: $(2,693)
- U.S.: $2,524

STATE GRANT AID

State aid programs are crucial for college access and success, and can be based on financial need, merit, or a variety of factors.

Average Undergraduate Grant Aid

(Per full time equivalent student, in 2018-19)

- Alaska: $980
- U.S.: $930

FEDERAL PELL GRANT AID

The Pell Grant is a federal need-based award that helps millions of students annually.

Alaska

(2017-18)

- Total Pell Grant Recipients: 10,150
- Total Pell Grant Dollars: $38,012,795

1 A negative affordability gap means that the cost of attendance is less than the sum of financial aid, family contributions, and student wages, etc. A positive affordability gap means that there is less financial aid than is needed to pay for college.
