

11:12:08 From rcook : Has anyone pushed back on that lack of registration from not completing? I'm hearing from folks about concerns related to "barriers to enrollment".

Thoughts?

11:13:13 From Korrin Stanek : At FIU we have an orientation hold applied when students matriculate that is removed by Academic Advisors when they meet with them at orientation or via appointment (appointment option for transfers only).

11:14:22 From Megan Frewaldt : @rcook: We've briefly had this conversation. We typically begin our orientations in April, so our students are already signing up. Thus far, we haven't had any push back from students. We did ensure them that some of the content was mandatory and other content was more resources. The just must complete the mandatory modules in D2L to be able to register, and then they can come back to D2L to take in the other materials throughout the summer.

11:14:33 From Marie Hornickel : At UW-Whitewater we have a First Year Experience hold that will be released once the student completes online orientation (pre-orientation) and also an advising hold that's released once the student has been advised.

11:14:44 From Korrin Stanek : @rcook, that used to be part of the discussion for us, but as focus has moved from enrollment numbers to student success, upper administration has supported required orientation.

11:15:46 From Shelley Sawalich : RCook - this is something we were already doing for our online students, requiring completion of the online orientation. The reason for it was to support student success by getting them the information that they need. While it MAY impact enrollment, what we have seen is that most of the students that don't complete orientation, also will not be successful in their academic program because they are not completing the things they need to do to be successful. This is different than what we are experiencing with the current crisis, but I still think that this applies.

11:16:37 From Marissa Lischinsky : The majority of our advisors (faculty) are not on-contract during the summer, so typically we ask for faculty volunteers to assist with advising and registration during June Orientation. Going virtual, our Vice Provost is leaning toward having academic deans create full schedules for students and then allowing adjustments during add/drop. Thoughts?

11:17:46 From Kelly Dalaski - Roanoke College : At Roanoke College, I'm wondering how to make a Resource Fair work.

11:17:51 From Korrin Stanek : @ Lisa McGuire Can you please post the name/link to that group in the chat?

11:18:11 From nicole : Hi Lisa- can you include a weblink to this virtual events ideas page you're speaking of? Thank you so much!

11:19:16 From Megan Frewaldt : @Kelly: To replace our Resource Fair, we are allowing the various offices/groups record a short video that will be available in our D2L course. These will not be mandatory for the students to view before they are able to register, but something they can come back to as they would like.

11:19:22 From rcook : Thank you Megan, Korrin, and Shelley. Agreed and like the idea of adding optional resources, while still creating mandatory content for "successful completion." I'd agree that these steps are indicators of student success, I worry that enrollment numbers are going to take over concern of success metrics in the current climate

11:20:06 From Korrin Stanek : @Mary T Calhoon - Can you please post the name or link to that resource here in the chat? That sounds great!

11:47:11 From Catherine (WCU) : Elizabeth, how many students are you expecting to go through your orientation program?

11:47:44 From Elizabeth : about 165 per session

11:47:55 From Catherine (WCU) : Thanks!

11:48:00 From Megan Frewaldt : @Kelly Dalaski - NACA just hosted a webinar with Microsoft on using Teams. A recording may be available. In that webinar, they shared this resource: <https://www.education.microsoft.com/en-us>

11:48:53 From Jimmy Luckman : Kelly Dalaski if you have access to LinkedIn Learning I heard that they have helpful online training about communication and using Microsoft Teams <https://www.linkedin.com/learning/microsoft-teams-essential-training-5/communicate-effectively-using-microsoft-teams?u=76816226>

11:49:04 From Kaitlynn Gambier : All of our Orientation programs are optional... Students register for fall courses in July. Various orientation programs take place throughout August and the first week of September (targeting different needs, math readiness, etc.).
