Transgender persons face a litany of health care disparities in our current system of care. Not only does discrimination still ensue, but those charged with providing evidenced-based care are often uncertain of the strategies and needs of this special population. This workshop will give providers the guidance they need to treat transgender men and women in their primary care practices as well as deliver cogent material for determining ongoing care for follow ups. From attending this workshop, attendees will acquire the skills needed to be comfortable and well-informed in the holistic care of transgender men and women.
