

Employer Identification Numbers (EIN) and Tax-Exempt Status

The Phi Delta Chi Fraternity is registered with the IRS as a 501(c)(6) tax exempt organization. As such, the national Fraternity has an EIN that was assigned to the national organization. Our EIN is specific for the national Fraternity and does not cover individual chapters. The EIN that was assigned to the national Fraternity MAY NOT be used by individual chapters for tax-exempt purposes.

Examples of where an EIN may be required for a chapter:

- Opening a chapter bank account at a bank or credit union

Many banks and lending institutions require an EIN to obtain a bank account. Chapters MAY NOT use the national Fraternity's EIN for obtaining a bank account. The Fraternity recommends opening checking accounts through the university when possible.

- Fundraising as a tax-exempt organization

To be considered tax-exempt, you must obtain an EIN and apply for tax-exempt status from the IRS.

The IRS website is a good resource to learn about EINs and tax-exempt status. Any chapter wishing to obtain an EIN number must do so on their own. While the National Office can answer general questions, we cannot work on your behalf.

Suggestions for obtaining an EIN and Tax-Exempt Status include:

- Certified Public Accountant (CPA)
- Business Attorney

Any questions about EINs should be directed to your CPA or business attorney.
