New Member Announcement

Please join us in welcoming

Evan Kraus, MD
with Virginia Physicians for Women to the Richmond Academy of Medicine

Dr. Kraus' commitment to medicine and community service was shaped early in life. He spent his high school years in Kenya, where his father served as a surgeon at a mission hospital. That formative experience instilled in him a deep appreciation for serving diverse cultures and the profound impact a physician can have within their community.

Dr. Kraus attended the University of Virginia and then moved to Richmond for medical school at VCU. He completed his OB/GYN residency at Wake Forest University. Dr. Kraus sees patients at VPFW's Henrico Doctors' office. He delivers babies at Henrico Doctors' Hospital.

Outside of work, Dr. Kraus and his wife are busy raising their three young daughters. He often jokes that after devoting his career to caring for women, he was blessed to have a household full of them. In his free time, he enjoys staying active, spending time outdoors, and tackling home improvement projects.
