Randolph-Macon College
is pleased to welcome
Laura Tudor, MMS, PA-C

Mrs. Tudor completed her undergraduate studies at the University of Virginia in 2012 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry. After graduation, she worked as a patient care technician on a pediatric floor where she was exposed to the many different roles within healthcare and fascinated by the complexities of working successfully as a team. From this experience, she was drawn to the PA profession for its commitment to training competent, compassionate providers to become an integral part of any healthcare team. She went on to receive her Master of Medical Science degree from Northwestern University PA Program in 2016.

Upon graduation, Mrs. Tudor accepted a position as a PA in the Department of Emergency Medicine at Virginia Commonwealth University (VCU Health), where she continues to work clinically in not only the Emergency Department but also in observational and telemedicine settings. During this time, she discovered a passion for patient safety and served as the Lead for Quality Assurance among Advanced Practice Providers, which helped to ensure continuity of care for patients discharged from the Emergency Department.
