He works hard to make patients feel comfortable and confident with their treatment plans and values a positive relationship with his patients.

He is interested in all areas of oncology and radiation oncology, including brachytherapy, image guided intensity modulated radiation therapy, and stereotactic radiosurgery and radiation therapy. He has been published in several radiation oncology journals, has several book chapters, and has presented at multiple national meetings. He also has a keen interest in radiation quality and safety and has focused his publications on that topic. He is passionate about this topic as it is of the utmost importance in ensuring the delivery of high quality radiation therapy in a stream lined, error free, patient centered process.
