Virginia Women's Center
is pleased to welcome

Megan B. Shannon, MD

Megan B. Shannon, MD joined Virginia Women's Center in 2018 and practices at their Short Pump, Mechanicsville and Midlothian locations. As a Urogynecologist, Dr. Shannon has been specialty trained in medical and surgical options for women with pelvic floor disorders. She recognizes many women are hesitant to talk about pelvic pain, bladder, bowel or prolapse issues and as a result, they suffer in silence. Dr. Shannon wants her patients to know that these are very common issues women of all ages face and can be managed in a treatment plan tailored to the patient.

Dr. Shannon received her Bachelor of Science in Biology from Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, NC and her medical degree from Wake Forest University School of Medicine. She completed her internship and residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology at Virginia Commonwealth University Health System. She then traveled to Chicago to complete a fellowship in Female Pelvic Medicine & Reconstructive Surgery at Loyola University Hospital.

Dr. Shannon and her husband enjoyed Richmond during her residency and are thrilled to return. When not caring for her patients, Dr. Shannon spends her time with her husband, son and their two dogs. They thoroughly enjoy Richmond's outdoor life and fantastic restaurant scene.
