New Member Announcement

Virginia Cardiovascular Specialists is pleased to welcome

Matthew J. Chung, MD

Dr. Matthew Chung has joined Virginia Cardiovascular Specialists (VCS) as an interventional cardiologist with fellowship training in coronary stenting and structural heart disease. He has a particular interest in complex coronary interventions and the use of minimally invasive catheter-based technologies to treat valvular and structural heart disease. He will see patients at the St. Mary's office location of VCS.

Dr. Chung received his medical degree from the University of Virginia and then went on to complete his internal medicine residency at Duke University Medical Center. Additionally, he completed fellowships in cardiovascular diseases and interventional cardiology at Washington University in St. Louis and a structural heart disease fellowship at Duke University Medical Center. He is board-certified in Internal Medicine, Cardiovascular Disease, Echocardiography and Interventional Cardiology.

In his spare time, Dr. Chung enjoys spending time with his family, exploring new cuisines and cheering on the Virginia Cavaliers.
