2005 SAT I Results

Following efforts to update the group of SAIS schools taking part in the reporting process, the statistical significance of the following information from the College Board's "College Bound Seniors 2005" may be of even more value to you and your admissions office.

Don't forget to read carefully the interpretive information booklet that comes with your school's report from the College Board. The information in that booklet provides ready-made context and wording for communication pieces to your school community and to the larger public in your area. The press will begin reporting soon ... be ready!

You will note in this year's report that SAIS schools show an increase of three score points for verbal reasoning, while holding steady on the math scores. The five-year trend in increases for SAIS (+13 points verbal, +12 points math) compares importantly with the +2 and +6 five-year trend for the nation. SAIS schools might suggest that we know how to IMPROVE on GREAT, on this benchmark.

You will note also the comparison to Georgia scores. Our report automatically gives this comparison based on our headquarters location in Atlanta. It is useful, however, to remember that Georgia is one of the most realistically reliable users of the SAT, with a sizable "n" of test takers.

Let us know if you have questions about the SAIS report and its usefulness in you school's admission, academic, or communications programs.
