The New Year is upon us and Arts and Ideas have just arrived or are on the horizon. This is the issue where we celebrate the spirit of StageSource Nights: our 30th birthday! The idea of a gala was tossed out. “That’s not who we are,” board members and I talk about the organization, and thank our friends card program; this StagePage and other programs we weave a web of connections that supports both individuals and the community we have been supporting for 30 years. We would not exist but donations fill the gap. Please try and join us at a community event. Our weekly E-Newsletter and website will let you know when all of these things are coming up and where registrations open, so make sure your membership is up-to-date and look forward to seeing you at the theatre!

The strength of StageSource is that is a membership organization for both individuals and organizations. The power comes from the depth and breadth of the community it serves. StageSource serves institutions and performers, small and large, with a focus on reaching audiences and increasing both the depth and breadth of the community it serves. StageSource is a key component of a web of connections that supports both individuals and organizations in creating theatre. We do it through our job fair, the StageSource Job Fair (Feb 21, 2016), the StageSource Auditions, workshops and professional development workshops on Creative Campaigns, Audition Workshops, Auditions, and our 30th Anniversary Town Hall event. Our weekly E-Newsletter and website will let you know when all of these things are coming up and where registrations open, so make sure your membership is up-to-date and look forward to seeing you at the theatre!
