Foundations Describe Slow Progress with Respect to Technology

The results from the new Technology Management Survey reveal 8% more foundations describing technology staff as "strategic leaders" instead of "utility or service providers." Learn More »

Third Quarter 2017 Update—Time to Get Our Hands Dirty. As a result of what we've learned, we're taking a more hands-on approach to our work. We're working with the tools, and we're asking grantmakers to do the same. Learn More »

Grantee Inclusion: What's It All About?

Including grantees in decision-making, program-building, and strategy is critical to effective social impact. While the things grantmakers “do” are important, authentic inclusion also requires that they embrace a new mindset. Learn More »

Why Email Deliverability is the Most Important Metric for Nonprofits

List size. Open rates. Page views. Click-through rates. Dollars donated. These are often the key metrics a nonprofit uses to determine the success of their digital program. However, it's not the most important one. The most important metric is email deliverability, or how many of the emails you send are making it into the recipient's inbox.. Learn More »
