In June, many academic institutions kept campuses closed to students, many staff, and most faculty due to the continuing COVID-19 pandemic. These institutions are offering summer classes online, and their libraries are offering online support in various capacities. The academic institutions are developing plans for allowing students on-campus while maintaining social distance guidelines prepared by the Center for Disease Control.

Respectfully submitted,

Ross Bowron
Health Science Librarian
Austin Peay State University
bowronc@apsu.edu